AMAZING BOWLS RESULT THREE RINKS ALL TIE!

Lawn bowls history was made in Hong Kong yesterday in the match between the Police and the Civil Service. All three rinks finished with tied scores, a sensational termination of a competitive match which is probably without precedent not only in this but all over the world. A one-in-a-hundred chance with the last wood of the match brought about this extraordinary result. E. G. Post was the bowler: the Civil Service were leading 60-57, the two other rinks having tied. Post broke up the head with a straight drive, carrying the jack and giving the Police a three head to complete the triple tie!

New Post For Sir Kingsley Wood

Cabinet Re-Shuffle Delay

An important promotion for Sir Kingsley Wood, the Minister of Health, is generally predicted as a likely result of the Cabinet re-shuffle which is to take place as the result of the retirement of Mr. Stanley Baldwin.

The exact moment when Mr. Neville Chamberlain will take over now appears to be in some doubt.

Lobby circles in London suggest that Mr. Neville Chamberlain may stay at the Treasury until his Budget proposals have passed through all stages in the House of Commons, and the vexed question of the Growth of Profits Tax has been finally settled.

The Chancellor agreed this week to give sympathetic consideration to the memorandum of leading industrial organisations concerning the new tax and it is predicted that important modifications will be decided by the Chancellor.

Belief is that the unexpected controversy over the Excess Profits Tax has upset all earlier plans regarding the Cabinet re-shuffle and in those quarters where an

LORD SNOWDEN DEAD

Passes Away Suddenly At Surrey Home

LABOUR PARTY'S FAMED IRON CHANCELLOR

London, Yesterday.

The death occurred suddenly to-day at the age of 73 of Viscount Snowden of Ickornshaw, famous as the "Iron Chancellor" when he occupied the post of Chancellor of the Exchequer in both Labour Governments.

HE WAS ONE OF THE MOST VIGOROUS LEADERS OF THE LABOUR MOVEMENT IN BRITAIN, BUT BROKE WITH THE PARTY ON THE FORMATION OF THE NATIONAL GOVERNMENT IN 1931 WHEN HE BECAME LORD PRIVY SEAL.

LATER HE FOUND HIMSELF IN SHARP DISAGREEMENT WITH MR. MACDONALD AND RESIGNED, BUT FAILED TO GAIN THE CONFIDENCE OF HIS FORMER FRIENDS OF THE LABOUR PARTY.

Viscount Snowden began his career as a civil servant. He entered in 1886 but retired in 1893, when he gave himself up to journalism and lecturing on Socialism. He was Chairman of the Independent Labour Party 1903-06, and 1917-20 and Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Labour Governments of 1924 and 1929-31. He represented Blackburn in Parliament 1906-18, and then the Colne Valley Division of Yorkshire from 1922-31. In the latter year he was created Lord Privy Seal. He was an Honorary L.L.D. of Leeds, Manchester and Bristol Universities. In 1905 he married Ethel, daughter of Richard Annakin, of Harrogate.

Such is a very brief outline of the career of the man with the brain in the Labour Party, when it first came to power. But for his physical infirmity resulting from an accident he would have been from the first, the outstanding figure in English political Socialism.

POLITICAL COURAGE

His vision was intense rather than broad, his outlook prejudiced and somewhat bitter, but he possessed a clear mind and boundless political courage as well as that high order of eloquence that is derived from passionate conviction and disinterested devotion to sublime humanitarian ideals.

There was much in him of the fanatic and doctrinaire, but he was saved from the defects of both by his capacity and willingness — not usually found in men of his type — to learn from practical experience. He believed in Socialism, as he perceived it, with his whole soul, and devoted his life to advancing it, but he did not allow his loyalty to the Socialist principle to lead him into intellectual duplicity. He would not deny proven facts to save the face of a theory.

CRIPPLED FOR LIFE

Philip Snowden was the son of a Kelghley weaver and was born at the village of Cowling, between Kelghley and Colne. He attended an elementary school, but was, in fact, self taught. In open competition, he won a post in the Excise. But, after seven years' work, a serious bicycle accident affected his spine and made him a cripple for the remainder of his life.

It was during the months of his serious illness that Mr. Snowden first devoted himself to the study the Whitsun holiday to prepare his new Cabinet.

It is now believed that the appointment of Sir John Simon to succeed Mr. Chamberlain as Chancellor of the Exchequer has been accepted by the Conservatives and that Sir Kingsley Wood will succeed Sir John Simon at the Home Office.

Cumberland Goes Aground

Shanghai, Yesterday.

H. M. S. "Cumberland", flagship of the China Squadron, bound for Nan-king with Admiral Sir Charles Little on board, went aground at 6.26 a.m. on the north bank of the Yangtze River near Chinkiang.

The mishap followed the anchoring of the "Cumberland" during a fog. She was refloated at 9.45 a.m. at high water.—Reuter.

AMUSING HOAX ON B.B.C.

London, Yesterday.

How an enterprising enthusiast got a first-class vantage point during the Coronation procession and hoaxed millions of people into the bargain, was told by the B.B.C. yesterday evening.

"The story was against ourselves last night," said the announcer who related the incident, "when the crowd of 100,000 were waiting outside Buckingham Palace to acclaim Their Majesties."

"An interloper boldly pushed his way through the crowd and climbed the B.B.C. cubicle erected for the Coronation broadcast in the Green Park."

"With complete composure he spoke into the microphone, and unsuspecting listeners all over the country heard him telling his impressions of the scenes outside the Palace."—Reuter.

NEW CRISIS IN PALESTINE

AMNESTY HOPES DISAPPOINTED.

Jerusalem, Yesterday.

Failure on the part of the authorities to grant an expected amnesty to 150 Arab political prisoners on the occasion of the nation, has led to increasing agitation all over Palestine.

Following announcement of a hunger strike by prisoners, all labourers and office workers in Haifa have announced their intention of striking until the amnesty is granted.—Trans-Ocean.

Further Rain Probable

The Royal Observatory reported last evening that the weak anticyclone over N. China has increased slightly in intensity. Pressure is relatively low in a trough extending from Indo-China to N. Luzon, and over Japan. Forecast:—E. winds, moderate; cloudy; probably some rain.

Catholic Seminary—Forcibly Closed

Weimer, Yesterday.

A Catholic boys' seminary in Heiligenstadt, in Thuringia, has been closed by the police on orders from the President of Thuringia, acting in his capacity of Minister of Education.

The seminary, which was a boarding school, educated boys from all over Germany, and its closing has caused somewhat of a sensation.

Official grounds for the action are that forty "cases of misbehaviour" on the part of the supervisors and assistants had been discovered without the Church authorities taking steps to rectify the situation.

Parents have been advised that the "morals of their boys are endangered at the seminary" and have been instructed to obtain private quarters for the boys. —Trans-Ocean.

King Christian's Silver Jubilee

Copenhagen, Yesterday.

Denmark to-day celebrated the Silver Jubilee of King Christian.

The official celebrations began at 7 o'clock this morning, when huge crowds assembled at the Palace and cheered till the King appeared on the balcony with the Kings of Norway and Sweden.

His Majesty attended service in the Cathedral at 11 a.m. after which he held a reception in Parliament House.

To-night there will be a State banquet and a torchlight procession to the Palace.

Thousands who waited outside the Palace this morning were much gratified when King Christian appeared alone on horseback for his customary center through the streets and parks of the city. He was enthusiastically cheered.

GREAT WELCOME While on their way to the Cathedral later in the morning, the King and Queen received a warm welcome from the crowds, who tossed flowers and carried banners until they had arrived at the Cathedral.

Following the service, which the King and Queen extolled King Christian's deep understanding and sympathy of his people, the procession returned to the Palace, where the King received deputations from all over the country. Warships in harbour fired salutes and bells pealed all over the country.—Trans-Ocean and Reuter.

PALACE THRILLS FOR MISS KUNG

London, Yesterday.

"I couldn't dance because the crowd was too great," said Miss Rosamond Kung, daughter of the Chinese Minister of Finance, Dr. H. H. Kung, recounting her experiences at the State Ball in Buckingham Palace to a Reuter correspondent.

"I never saw so many splendid dresses, uniforms and jewels," she added. "It was an unforgettable experience, and I enjoyed every minute."

The Chinese party was particularly struck by the masses of lovely flowers, she said, and the delegation was well looked after by a special attaché, who saw they were well-placed and properly attended at supper.

WONDERFUL SIGHT

Miss Kung continued: "The Royal procession was a wonderful sight. The King and Queen seemed to thoroughly enjoy dancing together."

"In the big procession which was formed into supper, my father conducted the Duchess of Norfolk."

Miss Kung is to-day resuming her investigation of social questions and is visiting several London schools.

Dr. Kung, Admiral Chen Shao-kuan, the Minister for Navy, and Mr. Wong Wen-hao, Minister for Education, went to the Palace this morning and were received by the King, together with other foreign delegates to the Coronation.—Reuter.

LONDON BUS STRIKE

DEMONSTRATION SCENES

London, Yesterday.

While the delegate conference of bus strikers was in session yesterday, busmen demonstrated outside the building.

The men carried large placards announcing that work would not be resumed until a seven and a half hour day was granted.

The demonstrators also appealed to the tramwaymen to join the strike.—Trans-Ocean.

After A Strenuous Day

HOT Summer days are very tiring, and when one has been on one's feet all day, especially out of doors, the skin itself begins to tire too. It begins to sag, and the feet are hot and grimy. Very often, after such a day, there is an evening engagement, theatre or bridge party, so it is most essential that a good invigorating facial treatment be used.

THERE is nothing more easy to use than an ice-pack, and the next time a dance or theatre engagement follows on a tiring day, try out these really rejuvenating treatments.

When dealing with an ice-pack, it must be remembered that the ice is never applied directly to the skin, as it would have a numbing and harmful effect.

As in all other face-pack treatments, the skin must be prepared by a thorough cleansing, firstly with soap and warm water, and then with cold cream. If sunburn is present, and there is a desire to bleach it, slap the face with camphor water. This is quite an easy and pleasant proceeding. All that is required is a small bowl of camphor water and a piece of cottonwool. Dip the wool in the water and repeatedly slap the face with it. This is a safe and effective bleach.

Do Not Apply Direct

BEFORE applying the ice, there are two points which must be remembered. First, and most important, the ice must not be applied directly to the skin. If it is, the cooling shock may be so great that the skin, instead of being refreshed, will become red and sore. Secondly, a certain degree of skill and practice will be necessary to achieve the best results from the pack. There are two methods of application.

If one is in a hurry, and the need is a brisk refresher, then give the skin an ice massage. This is simple, quick, and very effective.

Break a small piece of ice from the block, wrap a fairly thick piece of cloth around the ice, so as to provide a good grip, and also to prevent any jagged edges from cutting the skin. With this, massage evenly and briskly over the face. Do not keep the ice in any one spot for too long a period. It should be rapidly moved over the face with a circular movement. A small towel can be kept in the left hand so that any melting ice can be dabbed away, and thereby prevented from running down the neck or back. Four or five minutes of the treatment will be ample to rejuvenate the most tired of skins.

Distribution Of Shock

WHEN more time is available an ice-pack can be indulged in. The pack is made by crushing small pieces of ice between muslin and placing the mixture over the face. This operation will entail the aid of friendly assistance. There is need to recline while undergoing the treatment, and help is needed to lay the muslin pack down one cheek, across the chin, up the other cheek, and then across the nose and forehead.

The muslin must be laid on the face as quickly as possible, so that the shock will be evenly distributed. The pack should remain on the skin until it has reached body temperature. If desired it can then be removed and another one applied.

The whole object of this treatment is to apply the coldest pack possible, so as to make the muscles firm. This firmness is, of course, only temporary. For lasting results it would be necessary to undergo a series of facial exercises. But the use of ice is an excellent treatment, invigorating and astringent. It is used in all the up-to-date beauty salons.

These treatments should never be applied to a very red skin, red nose, or veiny cheek, as the condition would become aggravated. But, used intelligently, one will find that ice-packs will be an indispensable part of summer beauty treatment. As invigorators for busy shoppers in our hot cities they are unexcelled.

THE ABDOMEN

THE Abdomen! The very word sounds ugly and ominous, and that is exactly what the Abdomen becomes if not rigorously kept in good condition.

The abdominal organs sag in the case of 80 percent of civilised women, although they may not be aware of it, mainly through lack of nourishment, want of muscle, or having babies. This sagging is often the beginning of too many of the ills of women which unfortunately end on the operating table.

Paradoxical as it may seem, this lack of nourishment often comes from too much food in the intestines. These are, roughly, elastic tubes hung internally; when overcrowded with food or liquid, they become overstretched and heavy, and they drop, dragging other organs with them. This weakens their power of assimilation, and so undernourishment begins.

The fine muscular tone which nature intended these organs to have, is destroyed. Many women realise this dimly through their own internal sensations and so they try an amateur diet, emaciate their organs, impoverish their blood, and the lack of nourishment, though from a different cause, remains.

A normal diet on a practical basis is outlined in a final chapter, but the only certain way of developing internal health is Nature's way—Movement.

Although, as I have already insisted, muscle as such, is not usually our aim, in the case of the abdomen, definitely it is, and for this reason. Other vital organs such as the heart, lungs or brain, are incased in bone; but with regard to the abdominal organs, though the bones of the spine sacrum and hips can give some protection and support at the back, the chief burden lies on the abdominal muscles right round to the front.

Had nature intended bone to be here, no doubt she would have arranged it so. Evidently she needed movement and elasticity, and training that has too hardening an effect on these muscles is therefore unsuitable for anybody, and positively

RAIN spots on clothes can be removed by placing a clean, damp cloth on the material and pressing it with a warm iron.

A CLOTH, folded and placed on top of potatoes that have been drained in a saucepan, will collect the steam, and make the potatoes floury and dry.

A tablespoonful of melted butter added to the pancake mixture, just before frying, will improve the colour and prevent it sticking to the pan.

If a piece of orris-root is tied in a muslin bag and put in with the handkerchiefs while they are boiling, when ironed they will exude a faint violet fragrance.

A peculiar, but satisfactory method of removing grass stains from clothes is to rub on plenty of treacle and then wash the garment in tepid water.

SUCH happiness I've never known.
To-day has been Red Letter—
A friend showed me her new spring hat
And I liked my own much better.

"Some of us who out of loyalty were persuaded to join in the general celebrations were not unmindful that we were sharing in what was virtually a fool's paradise."

UNBORN To-Morrow

"Our capitalist is suddenly becoming conscious of the 'sanctity of the family,' when through his own depredations upon it, it is beginning to disappear."

LEAVING "dead yesterday" behind, our minds turn to "unborn to-morrow" which not even the pressing concerns of to-day can hinder us from contemplating.

Our King was crowned under a pall of darkness which all the brilliance of coronation could not dispel from our minds. Some of us, who out of loyalty, were persuaded to join in the general celebrations were not unmindful that we were sharing in what was, virtually, a fool's paradise, and that ere long we will have to tell the world what we intended when we crowned our King.

The majority of us, whose thinking is determined by selfish self-interest and by the loud-voiced slogans of our ruling-class, expect a continuation and an improvement of historic class privilege and economic well-being. To ensure that was the fundamental reason why our rulers deliberately chose whom they would have to be their King.

An unorthodox mind in their liege lord, no matter how informed was its sincerity, would have been too disturbing an element in their calculations and concerns.

Moreover, this is the class, which, unless it is forcefully stopped, will involve His Majesty and his subjects in all the tragedy and suffering of war. The King's truest happiness, indeed his only true existence, lies in the hands and hearts of those who accept him as their King under Christ. They alone will give him true honour which is not just contemporaneous with his pleasing them, but which will be always in accordance with the spiritual truth of his own being.

Process of Popularisation

IN the reign which is just commenced, Christians will have to exercise the most painstaking carefulness to make sure that their assessment of their King is true. Already the process of 'popularisation' him (according to the tradition of the ruling-class) has begun. There is one feature of the King's life, concerning "unborn to-morrow" which is being thoroughly promulgated everywhere, and that is his family life and his love of his children. In answer to the criticisms from many quarters concerning the disintegration of family life, and the laxness of personal relationships, the government has flung the fact that the new King is a 'family' man. The future of our children will be sure now that we have secured a 'family' man at the head of the State.

Our rulers in their anxiety to increase the population are so utterly wrong in their understanding of the minds of men and the conditions of their lives, that they argue that the future strength of the nation depends upon the "sanctity of the family," by which they mean a large family.

They are so purblind that they cannot see that they are putting the cart before the horse. Secure the life of the nation now, by wise and Christian government, by just and true economic equality, and the race will take care of itself.

This truth was first discovered in Britain by Good Queen Victoria who complained bitterly of the profligacy forced upon her by her ministers, and from her it has spread throughout the entire social scale. When Gladstone was Prime Minister a baker's dozen was a common size for a family in the middle-classes, now the odd one is the general rule.

Government's Concern

But why is our government so much concerned with the falling birth-rate? What made them so anxious to have a 'family' man as King? Is it because they are convinced of the value and beauty of life in Britain that they themselves are under an inward spiritual compulsion to procreate that there may be others to enjoy what they themselves love?

Is it because they are so sure that their policies will result in a perfect world that they are insisting that men have children to enjoy the fruits of their government?

I have no intention to be slipshod in asking those questions, although I agree that they are ridiculous and unnecessary and that they should not be asked, because it is openly apparent that the population question is urgent only because numbers are necessary to enable us to maintain our international position as a first class killing power.

"Unborn to-morrow" is in many respects more real than to-day to minds of our rulers. The facts are strikingly clear. Britain, according to experts, is facing a gradually diminishing population. The decline at present is slow, but as the proportion of elderly unproductive people increases the decline will become more rapid, until in a century from now Britain will only have a tenth of the population which she has to-day. Our ruling-class sees this fact against the growing fecundity of Russia, beside the many millions of China and India, it sees Japan "all poverty and picanineries," and then it asks, what is the future of our nation as a first-class power?

Germany and Italy are asking the same question, even Russia has her worries about it and begins to emphasise the importance of marriage, places a limit upon abortion, and frowns on casual divorce. Hitler gives a bonus on babies, and Mussolini canonises cohabitation. Britain collars the Churches and tries to re-establish the "sanctity of marriage and the family."

Discovery Of Family

Karl Marx said that capitalism exploits the worker. He would have been more completely truthful if he had said that capitalism exploits the family. The family was economically valuable to the capitalist, but now that it is ceasing to be, because he has ruined it, he is trying to recreate it that he may continue to benefit from it. Like the English poets who became Nature conscious when Nature was being swamped in a world of factory chimneys and machines, our capitalist is becoming conscious of the "sanctity of the family" when through his own depredations upon it, it is beginning to disappear.

Until a hundred years ago the family was the economic unit, and generally speaking it was the family, rather than the individual, which was the unit of consciousness. Parents made sacrifices for their children. Whole Scottish families toiled on barren crofts in order to send one son into the ministry (so that he might return and comfort them, and others like them, in their poverty).

But the point to notice about these sacrifices is that they weren't seen as sacrifices. They were the 'done' thing, the natural, inevitable, thing to do.

To-day when the unit of consciousness has shifted (largely through economic reasons) from the family to the individual, fathers and mothers, while in many cases still making sacrifices for their children, most of them are conscious that they are making sacrifices, they know exactly what they are doing, and so they are refusing, almost instinctively it would seem, to rear half a dozen youngsters under economic conditions which make life and sacrifice an intolerable burden.

The emancipation of women economically, the destruction of that pseudo-religious authority which the husband exercised over his wife, have each contributed to the change. Individuality has come into its own in the human heart and mind, just as individuality has lost its former validity in the economic sphere. The individual must now learn willingly to live in brotherhood, or to be at war within himself and within his world.

Pious Platitudes

Certain allied phenomena have also appeared. Sexual promiscuity is prevalent among young people; companionate marriage and other unclassified sexual experiments are being increasingly tried. Homosexuality flourishes and has acquired a literature of its own. Divorce is common, and the divorced man or woman (except in a few very select but negligible circles) is always persona grata. "Unborn to-morrow" from a purely moral point of view is going to be a terrific mess unless the human mind, under the divine inspiration, can produce some spiritual leadership which will be more powerful than the present reiteration of pious platitudes concerning marriage and the family.

Where is that leadership to be found? Certainly not in Fascism or Nazism. They have no remedy except to revert to the family that was, to call a halt to the emancipation of women, and to bribe the sexes to propagate.

Eugenics and birth-control science would be invaluable were society other than it is, but these sciences will never in themselves save society, but will rather contribute to its extinction unless we take a firmer hold upon our economic lives than we have ever done in the past. The negative attitude is just as valueless.

Behind The Individual

The individual who tells you that he refuses to have children because he will not supply "cannon-fodder" for capitalists is simply admitting that he cannot conceive of a sufficiently radical transformation of society which enable children to have a full and happy life. He is simply unwilling to root out the capitalist disease of selfishness from his own life.

The only justification for procreation in the present-day world is as an expression of a whole-hearted belief in the possibility of economic and social revolution within the lifetime of living men and women.

Whether that revolution will hearten and minds; we are deterred, and whether it will be valid, mining it even now.

depends on the reality of the religious appreciation of life in the individual.

By all means let us seek a spiritual revival, let us pray and think and strive to make it truly spiritual, for then it will be complete to include the whole of life, and only then will we relinquish the present economic and social system with all its corruption and death-dealing hideousness and undertake as necessity the building of the Kingdom of God.

"Unborn to-morrow" is in our hearts and minds; we are deterred, and whether it will be valid, mining it even now.

CLIMAX TO CORONATION GALA

TRAFFIC TIED TO SNAIL'S PACE

100,000 OUTSIDE PALACE

London, Yesterday.

The State Ball in Buckingham Palace, which was attended by no fewer than 2,000 guests, provided a fitting climax to the last day of the gala function held in connection with the Coronation.

As on previous days, crowds again gathered in front of the Palace and in adjacent streets in order to watch the arrival and departure of the distinguished guests.

Traffic was so completely blocked that the cars and carriages of the guests had to crawl through the streets at a snail's pace.

After repeatedly calling for the King and Queen, the crowd at last had a sight of Their Majesties when they appeared on a balcony.

The huge concourse burst into deafening cheers and sang the National Anthem several times.

At midnight about 100,000 people were still waiting outside the Palace and the King and Queen made several appearances on the balcony to acknowledge the crowd's homage.—Trans-Ocean.

Both films will arrive in Hong Kong on the 25th. First screening will take place in Queen Theatre on May 25th.

WERE SAFETY RULES RELAXED?

Berlin, Yesterday.

"We are faced with a deep puzzle," runs a cable received in Berlin from Lieut.-Colonel Breithaupt, of the Reich Air Ministry, who is at Lakehurst, New Jersey.

Together with Dr. Hugo Eckener, the zeppelin expert, and other members of the special German commission of enquiry which arrived in New York on the Europa, to investigate the cause of the Hindenburg disaster, he has carried out a thorough examination of the mangled remains of the once proud queen of the air.

Films and photographs, continues his cable, are being carefully examined for possible clues, and the commission is at present following a line of investigation into whether the usual safety rules were being observed on board at the time of the tragedy.

It has been hinted that the rules might have been relaxed as the voyage was drawing to a close, and that a burning cigarette or match may have been responsible.

A special committee from the United States Navy Department arrived at Lakehurst today to confer with the German commission.

It is believed that the question of delivering helium gas to Germany will be discussed and that perhaps negotiations will be concluded for its supply.—Trans-Ocean.

REBELS REJECT MEDIATION

SALAMANCA, YESTERDAY. "NATIONALIST SPAIN, WHICH IS FIGHTING TO FREE THE COUNTRY OF FREEMASONRY AND TO RE-ESTABLISH SOCIAL EQUALITY AND COMPLETE INDEPENDENCE, WILL NOT ENTER INTO PARLEYS WITH FOREIGN GROUPS WHICH MAINTAIN CONNECTIONS WITH MASONIC LODGES."

So declared the founder and leader of the Spanish Foreign Legion, General Millan Astray, in an official broadcast in reply to rumours that General Franco was trying to arrange an armistice with the Republicans through the good offices of a foreign power.

"Anyone who speaks of an armistice in the nationalist State is a traitor," he declared, and continued:

"When a nation is ready to die in order to win there can be no question of compromise."

"We shall never enter into parleys with the Madrid Government, since our aim is final and complete victory over Red Spain."—Trans-Ocean.

Leading Ladies To Inaugurate New System

As from Wednesday next, the establishment of radio-telephone communication between Hong Kong and the United States will be but a question of an arrangement between the Hong Kong Telephone Company and the Chinese authorities.

This, at least, appears to be the logical development of the announcement that direct telephone connection between Shanghai and America has been developed and that the service is to be inaugurated in Shanghai on Wednesday.

A prominent official of the Hong Kong Telephone Company told a "Sunday Herald" representative yesterday that the Company were aware of the development, but they had not been notified that the service would be available to Hong Kong subscribers. It was not possible to say whether direct conversation with New York would be available to Hong Kong until such notification was received.

QUITE FEASIBLE

The new link with the United States was, however, quite feasible as soon as Shanghai's service was fully established.

Madame Chiang Kai-shek, Madame H. H. Kung and Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt will perform the inauguration ceremonies on May 19. Both Madame Chiang and Madame Kung will talk with the wife of President Roosevelt.

Mrs. Kung knows Mrs. Roosevelt personally, having met her in the United States four years ago when she accompanied her husband on his economic mission to Washington.

R. W. FUSILIERS

Dinner And Dance At Hotel Cecil

Carnival revelry held away last night at the Hotel Cecil, when the Royal Welch Fusiliers celebrated the coronation of His Majesty King George VI by holding a fancy dress dance.

The dance was attended by nearly 500 persons, most of whom appeared in fancy dress of various descriptions. By kind permission of Lt. Col. D. M. Barchard and Officers the dance band of the regiment discoursed music.

The Fusiliers were guests of the Hotel Management at a dinner party which took place before the dance.

Mr. Chan Wai-chuen, manager of the hotel, toasting the guests, said that though the purpose of the assembly was to celebrate the Coronation, he was gratified that it might also do something towards knitting closer the ties of friendship between the Chinese and the British people.

Sergeant Morse, replying, thanked Mr. Chan for his hospitality and said he was speaking for all in expressing appreciation of the hotel's generosity and readiness to co-operate in every way when undertaking to cater for them.

Among those present at the dinner were:—R. S. M. & Mrs. Metcalfe, R.Q.M.C. and Mrs. Burton, C.S.M. & Mrs. Price, C.S.M. & Mrs. Grinham, C.Q.M.S. & Mrs. Green, Sgt. & Mrs. Hanagan, Sgt. & Mrs. Cutter, Sgt. & Mrs. Choley, Sgt. & Mrs. Dandy, Sgt. & Mrs. Hares, Sgt. & Mrs. Coway, Sgt. & Mrs. Kretschmar, Sgt. & Mrs. George, Cpl. & Mrs. Williams, Cpl. & Mrs. Smitham, Cpl. & Mrs. Miles, Sgt. LOCAL JURY TAKES UNUSUAL STEP

URGES CLEMENCY IN CHARCOAL MURDER

A LETTER TO GOVERNMENT

The unusual course has been taken by the jury which sat in the "Charcoal Murder Case" of acting together in sending an appeal for clemency for the convicted man, Chiu Yuk-fai.

It may be recalled that the verdict of "Guilty" returned at the conclusion of the trial was not accompanied by any recommendation to mercy. It was learned by the "Sunday Herald" yesterday, however, that the members of the jury, headed by Mr. J. L. Robinson, who sat as foreman, have since all signed a letter addressed to the Colonial Secretary, setting out the facts of the case as they saw and interpreted them, and explaining their views on the degree of culpability of the accused. This explanation was accompanied by a strong appeal for clemency.

The jury was composed of Mr. J. L. Robinson, Mr. C. R. Wilson, Mr. Yew Man-chiu, Mr. B. W. Simmons, Mr. M. B. Reyes, Mr. E. A. Kinsey and Mr. F. J. H. Jenner.

INDEPENDENT ACTION

One of the jurymen told the "Sunday Herald" that their action was decided upon spontaneously, the step being taken independently of the organisers of the petition which has been drawn up for public signature.

It is further learned that no date has yet been fixed for the execution of Chiu Yuk-fai. The law requires three clear Sundays to elapse between sentence and execution. To-day is the third Sunday.

The public petition is open to signature at several places including the "China Mail" offices, St. John's Cathedral and the Bluebird Cafe.

Rumour of Secret Hitler Visit To Rome

Only Gen. Goering In Train

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

VIENNA, YESTERDAY. "WE WANT TO SEE THE FUHRER" SHOUTED AN ENTHUSIASTIC CROWD WAITING ON THE INNSBRUCK RAILWAY STATION WHEN THE BERLIN-VENICE EXPRESS, WITH A SPECIAL SALOON CAR ATTACHED, ARRIVED ON FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

The German colony had assembled in force as a result of rumours that Herr Hitler was on his way to Italy secretly for the purpose of a special meeting with Signor Mussolini.

Instead of the Fuehrer, General Hermann Goering appeared at the carriage window and acknowledged the welcoming cheers.

In a short speech, the Reich Air Minister announced that the Fuehrer was not only not on the train but had no intention of going to Italy.

On arrival in Venice the same night, General Goering said he was only on a private visit and would escort his wife, who has been convalescing in Venice after her illness, back to Germany.—Trans-Ocean.

Economical Desserts can be so Gay and Colourful

By FRANCES LEE BARTON

Most Attractive Dishes Often Least Expensive, as These Recipes Show

What do desserts make you think of? Something expensive—something hard to prepare? And do you think you can't serve tasty, tempting desserts very often just because the food budget is limited? Then you've got a lot of pleasant surprises in store for you! For I'm going to give you some dessert recipes that are not only delicious, colourful, and attractive, but economical as well.

You can make the finest desserts you ever saw with Jell-O. Desserts worthy of the most experienced chef. And Jell-O is so easy to work with, and needs so little preparation, that you can put these desserts together in practically no time at all. For the first one let's take an old favourite:

Pineapple Fruit Mould

1 package Orange Jell-O
1 cup warm water
1 cup sliced pineapple juice
1½ cups sliced fresh or tinned fruit

Dissolve Jell-O in warm water. Add pineapple juice. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in fruit. Turn into individual moulds. Chill until firm. Serve plain or with whipped cream as dessert. Or un-mould on crisp lettuce, garnish with mayonnaise, and serve as salad. Serves 6. Here's another, even easier to make:

Cardinal Pear Mould

1 package Cherry Jell-O
1½ cups warm water
½ cup tinned pear juice
½ teaspoon powdered ginger
½ teaspoon salt

Dissolve Jell-O in warm water. Add pear juice, ginger, and salt. Turn into individual moulds. Chill until firm. Unmould. Garnish with sections of pears. Serves 4.

This one takes a little more time, but is well worth the effort.

Deep Dish Banana Dessert

1 package Lemon Jell-O
1 pint warm water
3 bananas
¾ cup cream, whipped
½ teaspoon salt

Dissolve Jell-O in warm water. Chill. When cold and syrupy, pour ½ of Jell-O into deep glass dish. Slice 2 bananas into this Jell-O and fold in carefully. Chill. Place remaining Jell-O in bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Mash remaining banana with silver fork and fold into whipped Jell-O. Fold in whipped cream and salt. Fill onto chilled Jell-O in dish. Chill until firm. Serves 8.

Just serve any of these desserts once, and you'll know that delicious, attractive desserts don't have to be expensive.

TRENCHES BATTERED INTO EXTINCTION

Graphic Story Of Bilbao Fighting

Rebels Smash Through To Famed "Iron Ring"

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

Salamanca, Yesterday.

Sanguinary fighting was reported from the Basque front yesterday. The insurgent infantry consolidated their newly-captured positions, while the artillery bombarded the Republican positions round Bilbao and rebel planes were again active.

ON THE MADRID FRONT THE LOYALIST AIR FORCE CARRIED OUT SEVERAL RAIDS.

ON THE WESTERN OUTSKIRTS OF THE CAPITAL, IN THE FRENCH BRIDGE SECTOR, THE INSURGENT INFANTRY COMPLETED "MOPPING UP" OPERATIONS.

Rebel planes bombed on the El Pardo and Jarama River sectors.

On the Asturian front the rebel artillery bombarded Trubia and Escampero.

On the Aragon front the rebel air force carried out a number of bombing raids over the Republican lines.

A war bulletin issued by the Republican Government in Madrid admits another successful rebel air raid on the capital.

Many were killed and much damage done.

RAIDER SHOT DOWN

Rebel air raids on the Basque front also caused much damage, though one of the raiders was shot down, the pilot escaping unhurt after a parachute jump.

On the Santander front the Republicans launched an attack on the rebel positions.

BARRIO CAPTURED

After changing hands several times, the town of Barrio finally remained in the possession of the loyalists, the rebels suffering severe casualties in counter-attacks.

On the Asturian front the Republicans claim to have dispersed rebel troops concentrating for a major drive.—Trans-Ocean.

BIG OFFENSIVE BEGUN

(Special To "Sunday Herald")

Paris, Yesterday.
An end to the long drawn-out struggle for possession of Bilbao, and with it domination of the Biscay Province, seems to be again in sight if the latest insurgent communiques from the battle front are to be believed.

It appears that the insurgents, who have been conducting operations on this front with a determination not to repeat the mistakes made on other fronts, where they advanced too rapidly, have after weeks of preparation, at last launched their big offensive.

Bilbao's crumbling outer lines of defence, which had been penetrated in several spots during the past week, now seem to have given way, and the insurgents claim to be hammering at the "iron belt" or last line of defence, of the beleaguered city.

MOUNTAIN BATTLE

The Paris newspapers, in long reviews of the decisive operations which occurred between Thursday and Friday night, state that there were two distinct phases in the battle, which raged mainly on the slopes of the Sollube Mountains.

The initiative was apparently first taken by the Republicans, acting on the principle that attack is the best form of defence.

On Thursday evening they launched a large-scale offensive in which mechanised units, most of which had arrived from Valencia in the past few days, played a prominent part.

A force of several thousand men was hurled against the insurgent lines. The men were taken to the point where the attack was started in sixty motor-trucks, escorted by four large tanks and a company of motor cycle machine-gunners.

ATTACK BREAKS DOWN

Object of the attack was to break through the rebel lines and capture the town of Berzo, but the offensive was broken by the many rebel machine-gun nests.

The struggle raged till midnight on Thursday, when there was a brief lull.

The second phase of the battle began early next morning, when the initiative passed to the insurgents.

Meeting with little resistance after a heavy artillery barrage had turned the loyalist trenches into a mere mass of shell-holes, the rebels swept the defenders from their positions all along the line.

HEIGHTS CAPTURED

By 11 o'clock on Friday morning, the insurgents had captured Mount Tollu and a few hours later, Mount Jaca.

Capture of these two heights has brought the rebels up against the "iron belt," Bilbao's lines of Torres Vedras.

Headquarters in Salamanca state that the rebels have virtually completed encirclement of the town of Amorebieta, and only the road from the town to Bilbao has not yet been occupied.

VALENCIA DENIALS

The Ministry of the Interior in Valencia has issued a statement emphatically denying that the port of Pilecin, Mount Jaca and the town of Munguia have been captured by the rebels.—Trans-Ocean.

Remarkable Local Cure Claimed

A remarkable cure in the last few days in Hong Kong, enabling a woman of seventy who had worn glasses for many years to discard them completely, is among the many achievements credited to applied psychology by Dr. Herbert Sutcliffe, D.Sc., D.Ph., the Australian psychologist and mental analyst.

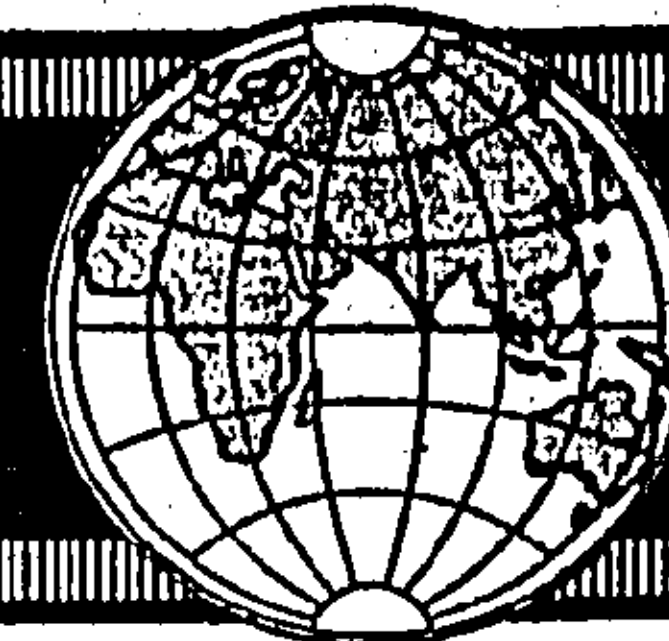

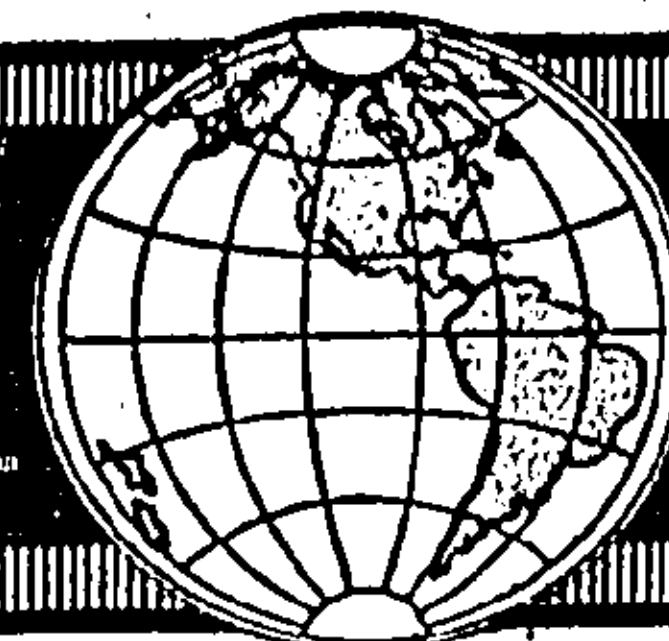

Dr. Sutcliffe, who has been in the Colony for a little over a fortnight, is giving three public lectures at the Helena May Institute on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at 5.30 p.m. each evening.

Inferiority complex, mental science, in relation to health, and personality, will form the subjects of the lectures, to which there will be no charge for admission. Dr. Sutcliffe, too, invites questions.

It is the contention of the doctor that most ailments are due to mental causes and are capable of being removed by psychological processes.

He is crusading "Radiant Living" through the world, and has already travelled over 50,000 miles, established 17 schools with a teaching staff of 185, and had private interviews with 19,000 people. He is leaving for Australia on May 20.

"What can I do! Junior simply won't take Castor oil!" . . . the distressed cry of many a mother. She can't blame Junior either, for Castor oil is certainly the horror of horrors for him. But, perplexed mother, there is a solution — and a grand one. It's WATSON'S MELCASTOL, that fragrant, sweetened corrective. Children actually like it . . . and not only in taste but in other ways too is it superior to Castor oil. It lubricates and cleanses the entire digestive system as no other preparation can do. It has a smooth action without after effects. MELCASTOL should be in every home where there are babies and children. In two sizes 20 cts. and 30 cts.

Look at life from a rose-coloured dress, glisten in gold or blaze in silk or satin evening gowns distinctive, sophisticated and unquestionably picturesque and flattering, all new and at RIVELLE'S. Alluring, feminine and seductive are their fragile and lovely lace gowns, their swirling, flaring skirts of brocade, shimmering satin or dull crepe. A hundred unusual effects. And daytime frocks, too-lovely slender frocks, printed with fine patterns and colour schemes, sport suits and togs, lively, gay and irresistible for the beach. RIVELLE'S have them all . . . and more . . . new bags and hats as well.

At MAIZEE'S they thoroughly understand the art of individualised fashions . . . they just look at you and offer you something lovely to flatter your figure and face. And, for that young luminous look — the famous Helena Rubenstein beauty aids are at MAIZEE'S.

BREWER'S BOOKSHOP are the first again with ever so many new books! There's J. B. Priestley's new chapter of autobiography, "Midnight On The Desert," one book that may outlast his and other generations; "Episodes Of The Great War" by John Buchan; "Ancient and Medieval History" by C. J. H. Hayes and Parker Thomas Moon; "The Flight Of An Empress," by Wu Yung, a fascinating account of the Boxer movement in China; "Caesar In Abyssinia," by G. L. Steer, a book of great contemporary interest. And once more to remind you: order your books or magazines through BREWER'S BOOKSHOP — you get them faster and cheaper.

Well — the Summer has definitely established itself and last week at the dances I saw many a young lady melting away silently. I admired their endurance, but pitied their ignorance when I thought of those beautifully light and cool evening frocks at LANE, CRAWFORD'S. Frocks not only light as a cob-web, but smart and amazingly original in their design. I imagined what a different picture that attractive but suffering young lady would make in the marvellous light apple-green dress I saw at LANE, CRAWFORD'S. There are many others: organdies, chiffons and the lightest satins.

And now that the fireworks are over . . . we can again pay some attention to feminine problems. I love patriotic celebrations, but I hate shining noses! So I am going to the GRAND DISPENSARY and with me, I hope, all you ladies to get summer toiletries. No more shining noses for me or for you, or powder running down in streaks . . . we are going to meet the summer with the only weapon — beauty preparations suitable for hot weather. At the GRAND DISPENSARY (now at the corner, China Bldg.) they are ready for the summer with cool summer lotions, creams, oils, powders and rouge.

When you go to THE JADE TREE, at No. 1 The Wharf, Kowloon, you will soon notice that you're not in a mere curio shop, but in a veritable miniature museum of Chinese art! You will find treasures of all periods — from the velvety bronzes and golden lacquers of ancient dynasties down to the cleverest of modern potteries and glass. You will find the taste of the connoisseur evident in everything in THE JADE TREE, and that particular exotic charm it contrives to weave from the very moment you enter its doors will delight you. And then — the pleasant surprise — you don't pay more than for the commonplace elsewhere.

The Whole Problem Of Destiny
Is Involved in China's Conception of the Dragon

Bearding the Dragon

It is to be wondered if the paper effigies of the dragon coiling the spirals of its oscillating body through the streets of Hong Kong on the occasion of the Coronation this week conveyed any meaning to the minds of the spectators.

China is known as the land of the dragon. In the course of her long history, in spite of all differences of periods, philosophies and civilisations, there is to be found the same general conception of the world expressed in a form which is not concrete but mysterious in its entirety, the marvellous dragon suggestion in its force let loose the whole problem of destiny. Greece, India, Egypt defied humanity. In China a haunting suggestion expressed with an utmost strength and fullness her conception of the unknown and the submission to forces that mankind cannot control.

Voice Heard In The Hurricane

Born in the watery depths, hidden in caverns, the dragon awaits the time when he slowly rouses himself into activity. "He unfolds himself in the storm clouds, he washes his mane in the blackness of the seething whirlpools. His claws are in the fork of the lightning, his scales begin to glisten in the bark of rain-swept pine trees. His voice is heard in the hurricane, which, scattering the withered leaves of the forest, quickens a new spring."

The dragon became, naturally, the symbol of the productive forces of moisture, and in an agricultural country like China, uncompromisingly practical, though astonishing swirling movement, impregnated with a sense of the clouds around him gallop like a fantastic squadron. What potential force must have been held in its representation for it to rush forth with such frenzied action.

The Nine Resemblances

The dragon has nine resemblances; the head of a camel, the horns of a deer, eyes of a rabbit, ears of a cow, neck of a snake, belly of a frog, scales of a carp, claws of a hawk, and palm of a tiger. There is a ridge of scales

Phyllis Juby

Says:

along its back, 81 in number. The scales on its throat lie towards the head and those on the head are disposed like the ridges of a chain of mountains. On each side of its mouth are whiskers and a beard hangs under its chin, where also is placed a bright pearl. It cannot hear. It eats swallow's flesh, for which reason when people pray to the dragon for rain they throw swallows into the water.

All through Chinese art we find representations of the dragon, either scattered over the surface of a vase as if the monster was, so to speak, diffused through the material and only seen in brief and fleeting glimpses, or used as geometrical ornaments on jades and mirrors, or again on grave-stones, the mythical being giving a fantastic impression of speed and force.

Fantastic Squadrons

We also observe the same presence in the misty washes of Chinese paintings. In either case we are faced with something immanent which refuses to clothe itself in concrete form; wherever the dragon appears it creates an brilliant pearl in its mouth, and as he approached it the snake is said to have addressed him thus: 'I am the son of His Majesty the Dragon and while recreating myself was wounded; to you, Sir, I am indebted for the preservation of my life and have brought this pearl to recompense you for your kindness.' The minister accepted the pearl and presented it to his sovereign who placed it in his hall where, by its influence, night became as day."

China Ceremony Of Accession

Since the reign of Kao Tsu of the Han dynasty, 206 B.C., the five-clawed dragon has been the emblem of imperial power. The Emperor's throne was called the Dragon Seat, and his robes, articles of household use all bore the device of the scaly monster.

Such a ceremony as the Coronation of an Emperor is unknown in China. There was a ceremony of accession to the throne. On that occasion, the Prince proceeded to a terrace of three storeys high at the head of a great concourse of officers. Flags and satin umbrellas were arranged on his right and left hand. Military and civil officers at a given signal bowed their heads nine times. The Prince, seated in a sedan-chair covered with yellow satin came to the altar erected on the terrace.

Declined Acceptance

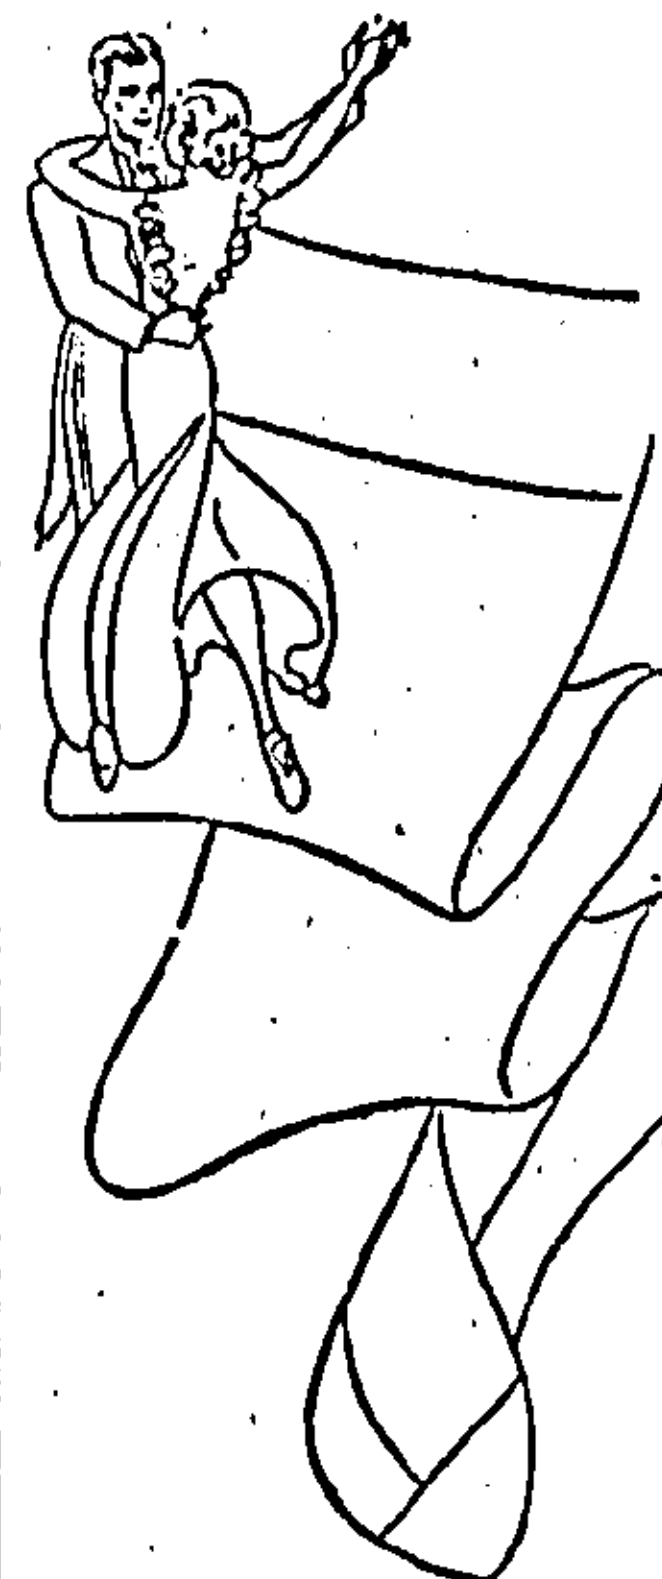

Immediately in front of him was carried an umbrella having the shape of a dragon. The band of music consisted of a pipe, two trumpets, a fiddle, a lyre, and an alligator harp. The keeper of the seal came and all about the terrace knelt to listen to the reading of the manifesto. When the reading was ended the new Emperor ascended to the throne and offered a sacrifice to Heaven and Earth. Then he received the seal with both hands, laid it upon the altar and declined acceptance, saying: "I pray that another more able may be chosen." But the Keeper of the Seal would say: "The merits of Our Lord are manifested to the whole world. Moreover he is of the Dynastic Family and it is fitting that he should succeed. And all the officers shouted, 'Eternal life to the Emperor!'"

The dragon is not dead; it is slumbering in the heart of every Oriental. The fantastic beast still gallops, writhes, threatens and imposes itself more fiercely than any known creature. The original dragon emerges at times only in order to conceal itself more surely. He is the very distinctive symbol of the Chinese ideal—an ideal consisting in mystery expressed in a form that is not concrete, dreaded or loved for its own sake.

Madame Frances Denies, the dramatic soprano, who is giving a recital at the Helena May Institute on Tuesday at 9.15 p.m. Mr. Harry Ore will be the accompanist.

RECALL TO BUSINESS

ONE of the grounds of the prevalent uneasiness about the future of the European civilisation is the tremendous rate at which we live. The traffic problem has taught us that though accidents will happen from time to time, they happen much more frequently when we are travelling at sixty miles an hour than when we are content with the statutory twenty. All political developments are movements in a crowd, and we never know when some guy is going to step absently into the middle of the road. At the highest speed there is less time for the brakes to act or for the hooter to give warning.

When Hong Kong first became a British Colony it took at least six months for such outposts of the Empire to hear of a coronation, and several months more before all the details and consequences could be collected and digested. Last week was, as His Majesty remarked in his broadcast speech, the first time that the voice of a new King could be heard by all his subjects. More wonderful still is the fact that loyal citizens in Brighton could sit in their own drawing rooms and see the whole of the procession. Broadcasting has already practically killed the old-fashioned "demonstration," the purpose of which was to indicate popular feeling by collecting a hundred thousand people at one place as a proof of their agreement with the sentiments announced from a distant platform by eloquent speakers that many could not even see, and most could not hear. Will the cheering crowds of the streets also become merely a memory, and a few important officials be left to perform their functions before a screen which will transmit the scene to interested multitudes sitting in their armchairs by a table plentifully provided with light refreshment? We are all conscious that we are more and more caught within the meshes of a mechanical network which is beyond our personal control, but the prospect of stirring events happening without human contact is rather chilling.

Certain it is that the work of the world will not suspend itself even for the most gorgeous ceremonials. The King's father came to the throne at a moment when decisions had to be taken at once without regard to his personal convenience. Mr. Lloyd George, with his budget which imposed taxation that would seem very light to-day, but which had been introduced with the maximum of provocation to a class war, had raised the whole question of a second chamber and its right to vote on taxation questions, and either the budget had to be passed or a list of 150 gentlemen had to be approved for elevation to the House of Peers for the purpose of passing it, and therewith starting the sort of revolutionary struggle which Labour Leaders like Mr. A. J. Cook were aiming at. Ireland also, so near to the establishment of self-government with what promised then to be only a temporary exclusion of Ulster, chose to get wildly excited rather than accept the boundary which is at present the dividing line between the two sections, and the only hope was that by calling a conference the King might preside over a settlement that would be independent of the extreme mischief makers. The budget question got itself settled by the transfer to the other division lobby of a few Peers who had kept their heads cool enough to put the country first and party second. Ireland had no such middle party, and the rift was only widened, so that to-day Mr. De Valera makes complaint against the throne that it could only supply the opportunity of a compromise and not the wisdom to accept it.

The new King has different problems, but they are equally as important. He has already entertained the Dominion representatives who will this week have to debate policies of combined action which will make the history that concerns us most for the next few years. It is absurd to talk as though even they had the power to make big decisions at their own discretion. Their policies will have to be approved and carried out by the various Dominion Parliaments to whom they will report, but the situation is quite new, for when they have decided what they want to do, they can advise the King directly. Control and advice have been discarded for consultation and agreement, and the new reign will take its character to a large extent from the success or failure of the new system.

At Westminster Abbey on Wednesday. His Majesty King George VI and his Queen dedicated themselves to the service of their people and were crowned with all the pomp and pageantry rooted in the tradition of a thousand years. Millions of people by the 'miracle' of wireless followed every step of the solemn ritual, sharing with the brilliant concourse in the Abbey assembled to do personal homage, both the rich colour of the ceremony and its high seriousness. Lining the route of the spectacular processions were two millions of His Majesty's subjects, drawn from every quarter of the globe, of every race and creed and colour, and such were the acclamation and the demonstrations of loyalty and affection as the State Coach passed slowly through the immense crowds that there could be no possible doubt of complete and final, enthusiastic acceptance of the King so suddenly and unexpectedly called to the Throne.

Throughout the Empire, unparalleled scenes in celebration of the historic occasion were witnessed, except in Dublin. There Republicans seized the opportunity for anti-British demonstrations and Mr. de Valera found it expedient to use the Coronation period to place his proposals for constitutional changes on the Order Paper in the Dail, in pursuance of his programme for gradual destruction of the Imperial links. Hong Kong excelled itself in festivities, with a display in illumination that turned night into day and transformed the city into a veritable fairland. The very real spirit of loyalty was made manifest more importantly by wide participation in the religious services held on Coronation morning.

Solidarity of the Commonwealth was unmistakably revealed. Speeches at the Imperial Conference which opened on Friday at St. James's Palace merely gave emphasis to a fact already plainly spoken to. They were, nevertheless more than ordinarily interesting and will have been marked by those who have professed to believe in the 'decline and fall' as worthy of earnest thought. Varied positions in the Empire scheme of things were characteristically marked in the views expressed by the Dominions Prime Ministers. Canadian stress was upon economic progress and the lowering of trade barriers. Australia, with more reason to interest herself in the sphere of Imperial strategy, indicated her willingness to contribute more effectively thereto in the future, and South Africa, too, admitted the Home Government's right to expect the Dominions to put their defensive houses in order. The recent brush with Germany over South-West Africa has pointed a moral in Pretoria.

Coronation and conference together, whether by accident or design, have presented a perhaps desirable picture, for the benefit of foreign observers, of a strengthened Empire unity, of a closer cementing of the ties to-day than has ever before existed in freewill and goodwill.

Italy boycotted the Coronation, without committing the final affront of withdrawing their Ambassador from participation. Anglo-Italian relations have not been so strained since August, 1935, as they are to-day, obscure though the reason is. Count Ciano, in a statement of Italian foreign policy on Thursday, failed to clarify the situation. He referred ambiguously to an "unforeseen development" which had intervened to check rapprochement with Britain, but gave no hint of its nature. The disturbance might possibly be traced to persistent reports of increasing economic difficulties in Italy, whose resources are believed to be strained to their utmost.

In Spain, solution seems no nearer. General Mola, according to insurgent reports, has been proceeding from crushing victory to crushing victory on the Bilbao front, without, for some reason, reaching his objective. The position of the defenders does appear to be getting desperate, but there is no talk of surrender. Elsewhere, Franco's achievements are worse than nil. The Republicans still hold the initiative round Madrid and have battled their way into Toledo. In the South, General De Liano, for all his broadcast activities, has done nothing since the capture of Malaga with Italian divisions. Behind the lines trouble in Barcelona has been overcome. The tragedy of it all is that every day of what amounts to virtual deadlock merely adds to the toll of devastated property and of life.

The presence in London of Dr. H. H. Kung set off rumours once again of the negotiation of a substantial British loan to China. Denial was quickly forthcoming, but in terms conveying plainly that China is making a determined bid to secure British financial goodwill. Nanking is backing up Dr. Kung's efforts and announcement was made on Thursday that China's Budget for the coming year had been balanced, with revenue and expenditure equalised at $1,000,000,000.

The Far East situation generally is setting Britain many problems. Japan's anxiety for better understanding is reciprocated for a variety of highly practical reasons. At the same time, Chinese opinion clearly views with disfavour any suggestion of Anglo-Japanese dalliance for any reason whatever. Mr. Eden thought it desirable to explain on Friday that Britain would enter into no arrangement with Japan which did not afford every protection to Chinese rights and territorial integrity. China, it is safe to predict, remains unsatisfied. The attitude tends towards this: that Britain can be friends with China, or friends with Japan, but not both.

SCRUTATOR.

THE PASSING HOUR

By A. N. M.

The Poet Laureate

IT does not seem likely that the broadcasting of official speeches will ever supersede the appeal of a really stirring poem by a poet who is recognised as being capable of expressing the national sentiment on passing occasions. The difficulty is to find the poet. Never was there a time when the recognised practitioners of the art were so little in touch with the vast class of "straphangers" who will not even read poetry, much less repeat or quote it, unless they find that the poet is performing his proper function of expressing their own thoughts better than they could express them themselves. The trouble is really twofold, for after the poet has been caught he is liable to be paralysed by the responsibility. One would have thought that if anyone could do it John Macaulay could, for his early work showed no prejudice in favour of the respectable, and no lack of vigour. His poem is better than any of the official efforts of his predecessor, who made the stipulation that he should not be called upon to write anything unless he felt that way inclined. Even if we admit that Robert Bridges was the outstanding poet of his day, his style and metrical experiments were such as to make his work a closed book to the straphanger.

Alfred Austin

HIS caution was justified by the fate of Alfred Austin, who was appointed by the Marquis of Salisbury in some moment of cynicism excessive even for him. Austin was for years the writer of the political leaders in the "Standard," now defunct, but for a long time the unwavering supporter of the Conservative party. He had written some verses of a patriotic strain so undisturbed that even their titles have long been forgotten. Fame came to him overnight when he printed his effusion suggested by the Jameson Raid,—"There are girls in the Gold Reef City." The suggestion that the notorious incursion was prompted by a mad desire to rescue the Johannesburg girls from the wild advances of the Boers was too much even for the Raiders themselves, who made of the famous line a kind of jesting password. It was too much even for the poet himself, who never tempted fame again.

Lord Tennyson

IT is not easy to assess the achievement of Tennyson in his official efforts. He was far too dignified to choose unsuitable occasions or to make any such gaff. His whole style, to tell the truth, and his outlook on life were so thoroughly "Victorian," in the sense which has been rejected by our contemporaries, that he satisfied the requirements of the moment, but in a way that does not appeal to the twentieth century. His "Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington" has been admired by competent judges. His appeals for recruits in the early days of the Volunteers, such as "Arm, rifleman, arm," seem to belong to an earlier stage of warfare, and his adjuration to the shopkeeper to "strike, with your cheating yardward, home" does not seem to be tactful. The Carlylean enthusiasm for war for its own sake, as a gale of manliness that can blow away all the cobwebs of shifty commercialism, is about the last doctrine that we should expect to be popular until people have forgotten all about Passchendaele.

Wordsworth

PERHAPS the greatest poet that has ever earned the 'butt of wine' which is still reputed to be the guardian of the laureate, was William Wordsworth, but in his case the recognition came just at the turning point in his career when he ceased to find new inspiration and began to repeat himself. None of his laureate poems remains in the public memory, but in any case it must be admitted that he had no very inspiring monarch to write about. Researches of the last few years have done much to revive Wordsworth's personal attraction by the revelation of his enthusiasm for the French Revolution and popular causes generally. He even married a wife in France, but when it turned out that the ceremony was irregular through being performed by an official who had not been duly vested with the proper authority, he and the lady decided to take no steps to rectify the bond. It also appears that he did not deserve to be branded by Browning as the "Lost Leader," who had deserted just for a ribbon to stick in his coat," for his later letters show good reasons for a modification of his views, and rescue him from the accusation of snobbery. Nonetheless, though his name conferred honour on the office, that was because of his earlier work.

Early Laureates

IT was in fact Wordsworth that created the tradition that the appointment should go to the greatest poet of the day. Earlier generations were much more easy to please, and the names of his predecessors live on only in the lines of the satires of Pope and Byron, who were not congenial to the Court. The only one who is over read now is perhaps Colley Cibber, if he is indeed ever read. The great poets who have actually sung songs that found an echo in the national heart have like Pope and Byron, been too outspoken, one thinks of Browning and Swinburne and Kipling. Swinburne was a professed republican, but Kipling's innocent crime was a reference to the "Widow of Windsor."

Health Through Physical Fitness

A Weekly Common-Sense Talk

BY L. KNIGE,

Director, Hydro-Therapeutic Institute, Hong Kong.

This Week I Discuss: "The Pasteurisation of Milk."

Pasteurized milk is milk which has been heated from 142 degrees, to 145 degrees Fahrenheit. The normal human body temperature is about 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit, and the milk is kept at that temperature for about thirty minutes, for the purpose of killing disease germs that might be present in the milk. The process is named after the great French scientist Louis Pasteur, perhaps Humanity's greatest single benefactor, who through the troubles of a poor wine-maker, began his researches on the effect of heat checking the fermentation in wine, which studies later extended to milk and led to pasteurisation.

All milk contains living germs, except such milk as that which has been repeatedly boiled or sterilised. It is practically impossible to obtain germless fresh milk, no matter what degree of care is used in milking the cow, for the very simple reason that the tissues of the udders of the majority of healthy cows contain germs or bacteria. After the milk leaves the udder there are innumerable opportunities for the introduction of other germs, from the body of the cow, the air, the clothing and hands of the milker, from dust, from dairy utensils, contaminated water supply, flies, etc. When we speak of germs or bacteria, we mean minute, one-celled plants, which are so small that 8,000,000,000,000 could fit into a space occupied by a pin head. All germs multiply very rapidly in milk. The rapidity of the multiplication depends upon the temperature. A single germ living in milk will produce five or more within twenty-four hours at 50 degrees of heat, at 70 degrees F. it will produce 750 in twenty-four hours. The most favourable temperature for germ growth is between 70 and 100 degrees F. This illustrates the great importance of the immediate proper cooling of milk after it is obtained from the cow. Investigations made in certain parts of India have shown that there are more germs in neglected milk than in sewage.

Pasteurization destroys all disease producing germs. The various germs which are the cause of typhoid fever, diphtheria, milk sickness, scarlet fever, septic sore throat, etc., including the tuberculosis are all killed when the milk is properly pasteurized. It is indeed marvellous that this simple process which produces hardly no change in the milk, yet makes it thoroughly safe for human beings. The "cooked taste" is so slight, as a general rule, that even when it does exist, many experts cannot detect it. It is true that Vitamin C, which prevents scurvy, is destroyed, but this Vitamin exists in such small quantities in fresh milk that it cannot be relied upon as the body's sole source of obtaining this Vitamin, certain fresh fruit and raw vegetables must be taken as a supplying factor.

The great advantages of pasteurization have been fully indicated, briefly they may be summarised as: 1. It makes the milk safe by destroying disease producing germs that may be present. It prolongs the period of usefulness of the milk by reducing the number of acid forming germs which are responsible for the souring of the milk. It does not kill these lactic acid germs entirely however, hence their further growth must be prevented by keeping the milk sufficiently cold. This can be accomplished very simply. Just put your milk in the refrigerator and only take it out when it is actually required for use.

"Certified" milk is different again from pasteurised milk in that it does not undergo the process of heating. Generally it can be said to be that it is milk which is produced and kept under ideal conditions. There are many rules covering its production which are rigidly adhered to. These rules embrace the health of the herd, and their housing and feeding; milking and the care of the milk; water supplies and toilets; health of employees; and high standards of excellence of the milk. By the use of this method of production, the "certified" milk can contain less germs than ordinary milk even after pasteurisation.

In Hong Kong where there are not only the ordinary difficulties associated with the production of clean milk, as in such countries as England, it follows that there is more effort behind the supplies of milk that you consume daily. For not only are the Milk Depots and the Milkmen all rigidly controlled, but the herds receive a degree of attention, and are fed in a manner which is outstanding, using the ordinary methods at present prevailing in England as a standard. It is only within recent years that the Home Health Authorities have set out to clean up the Home milk supply. Before that, the average herd contained many diseased cows, quite unknown to the dairymen in whose herd they were.

In some countries the Health Authorities have an almost full control of milk production and they can do everything that is necessary to ensure the utmost cleanliness. This in turn means even greater protection to the consumer. Denmark is one of the leading countries in this field. There all the dairies are regularly inspected and both the herds and equipment receive official approval.

New Zealand is a country where clean milk has received the attention of the Government over a long period of years. Probably the finest butter made in the Empire is manufactured in this Dominion.

Cream is controlled by pasteurisation, in exactly the same manner as milk. And your cream should also be kept in the refrigerator in a similar way. By so doing you will retain the freshness and smoothness until the time for use arrives.

A point to remember. Should you intend to use, during cooking, water with milk, you should always add the water before you heat the milk. In this way you are sure of the water being as clean as the heated milk and it will not effect your method of preparation in any way.

Mainly about WOMEN

Snapped at Repulse Bay by the "Herald" photographer during the week-end.

Soldier, Sailor, Pirate — And Woman

WOMEN'S suffrage is no longer a subject of argument, or if there is argument on some point it doesn't cause any more excitement. In fact even the dictators who want to send women back to the kitchen cannot curtail their influence as much as they would like. Though the suffragette doesn't feel that she has gained all she might, looking back thirty or forty years—what a difference! And then coming across some old documents we suddenly discover that even some hundreds of years ago woman was not quite the cage-bird we had imagined her to be.

We find the story of Mary Read, soldier, sailor, pirate, and lover goes beyond even the wildest dreams of the most advanced feminists. The story of this seventeenth century girl seems to show that if Europe flies again to arms, regiments of women may be a natural rather than a fantastic development—the present era very probably possesses many unsuspected Mary Reads.

The unfortunate mother of Mary was the wife of a British sea captain—who sailed away and never came back. "Hard-up" and in hopes of a legacy, she tried to pass little Mary off as a legitimate dead grandson. The mother-in-law was deceived—and so a boy Mary had to remain.

But when Mary was thirteen she ran away to sea, becoming powder-monkey on a man-o'- war. Five years of service with the British Navy followed, and then the powder-monkey—now a fine young lady of eighteen—deserted, landed in Flanders, and enlisted as a Light Dragoon in Marlborough's armies that were fighting the French. No one suspected that Mary wasn't as good a man as she was soldier—but Mary's own heart gave the show away, for she fell in love with a fellow-trooper, a handsome young Fleming.

She had already saved his life in one or two encounters, and when she blushing confessed the truth of what she was he proposed marriage. So when the regiment retired into winter quarters Mary for the first time in her life assumed petticoats, and the astounded regiment assisted at the wedding of "two troopers." The amused and sympathetic officers procured their discharge from the Service, and subscribed enough money to enable the "two troopers" to open a tavern near Breda, in Brabant.

However, very shortly after, poor Mary was suddenly widowed. In her unhappiness she reverted to a way of life that was natural to her—went back into breeches and enlisted in a Regiment of Foot. But soldiering reminded her too forcibly of her dead husband, so she secured her discharge and made for the nearest port. Here she secured a seaman's job on a trading ship bound for the West Indies.

The ship was captured by British pirates, and Mary forcibly enrolled in the pirate crew. She had no objection—in fact, she took to the life wholeheartedly.

Now comes the most wildly incredible part of Mary's story—stranger than fiction, as they put it. It was Captain Jack Rackham, one of the most notorious of the pirates that infested the coasts of the West Indies, who had added Mary to his crew. Shortly after, an English ship, the Star, was attacked by Rackham. It was only boarded and finally scuttled after a desperate fight, in which Mary, cutlass in hand, took an active part. And Peter Hines, the mate of the Star, found himself fighting for his life on the blood-stained decks with a handsome, beardless young ruffian whose fine dark eyes flashed fire. So hard and well did Hines fight that Mary—for it was she—was hard put to it to disarm without injuring him, the man with whom she had fallen hopelessly in love even as they crossed cutlasses. But, the better swordsman of the two, she did disarm him—and claimed him as her own special prisoner. Hines was soon fast friends with his captor, puzzled as he was by her fascination—until, under the Caribbean moon, Mary confessed to him that she wasn't the man she appeared to be.

And when at last the pirate ship was brought to bay, it was Mary, who, at the trial, made an impassioned plea for the life of the man she loved, urging that he had joined under compulsion, and so should be accounted innocent. Her pleading so moved the judges that Hines was set free.

But the gallows were to be cheated of this courageous, lawless, reckless and loving creature. A sudden fever seized her in gaol, and in a matter of hours only she was dead.

—PHILIPPA.

PRINTING INVITATION CARDS AT HOME

LINO-CUTTING IS AN INEXPENSIVE HOBBY

FOR decorating some of the many cards we like to send or give our friends on special occasions, lino-cuts have much to commend them. In case the words "lino-cut" are unfamiliar, and in case their domestic saviour should make a false expression—they have nothing to do with a kitchen floor—an explanation of them is given here.

A Lino-cut is a print taken from an inked block of linoleum on which a picture or pattern has been cut. The process is much the same as that of a woodcut, or a wood engraving, and is really not far removed, if the two names may be mentioned in the same breath, from an etching.

Lino-cutting is, the simplest of all ways of making printed pictures. Though elaborate and beautiful lino-cuts are often produced by experienced people, an inexperienced person can, at very little cost, achieve a charming and striking effect from a simple design, and, by taking prints, use it in a practical way.

The type of design will, of course, vary in each case. Designs with large blocks of black and white are likely to be much more successful than delicate outlines. Lino-cutting is a medium for boldness.

For Christmas cards, there are innumerable possibilities.

A calendar should be more restful in its theme, if it must last for a whole year. Programmes like invitations, should give some indication of their type, and, for most amateur performances, should be frivolous. Menus are a serious matter, for meals are serious things. But not so the design on the menu card. A high-stepping chef with steaming plates and dishes might help to give the hospitable and inviting air that is part of a dinner party; or perhaps a lobster emerging from a sadly waving bed of seaweed.

Technicalities

HAVING decided on a design, the next thing to do is to transfer the design on to a piece of the specially prepared lino block, a large piece of which can be bought for a shilling. The easiest way is to paint an area of the lino block the size of the picture with Chinese white. When this is dry, lay the pencilled design face downwards on top and rub the back of its hard until the lines are clearly shown on the white surface. The picture will then, of course, be back to front, as is necessary for printing.

The cutting is fascinating work, for the lino block cuts easily. It is the sort of thing that can be done on winter nights by the fire, provided the light is good enough and the chippings are not flicked too far afield. All the white parts of the picture are carefully cut away, so that in the printing only the "blacks" will be covered with ink. Care must be taken not to weaken the edges by undercutting.

The Art Of Printing

THE printing is entertaining. The first necessities are printing ink and a rubber roller for spreading the ink over the lino block. This generally takes a little practice till the right amount of ink can be judged.

The block is then placed very carefully face downwards on to a sheet of paper. There are two ways of proceeding then. One is to rub the back of the paper against the block, firmly and patiently, with the back of a spoon, or some equivalent, peeping carefully under the corners now and then to see how the print is going.

The framed lino-cuts that are seen in exhibitions are generally done this way. The second way of printing is by sheer pressure. For taking large numbers of prints from a small block, this is far more satisfactory, especially if the prints are for calendars or invitations or something of the kind, as their backs do not get dirty as in printing by hand pressure.

Many ingenious ways can be devised for applying the pressure. An old letter or book-binding press is perhaps the most successful, and should print a hundred copies in an evening. With practice a mangle, too, can be used, or the wringer from an electric washing machine, in which case strict cleanliness must be enforced, or, on the following Monday, the sheets and towels and everything else will be well printed back and front with your excellent design. A clamp or a vice from a carpenter's bench can be adjusted to make quite an efficient printing press.

Other coloured inks rather than black often make cheerful variations, particularly if any writing or printing is done in the same colour.

Although considerable experience and ability are needed to produce lino-cuts of different coloured blocks, and complicated designs, a complete beginner will find it well worth while to try this simplest kind of lino-cutting. The results are generally surprisingly gratifying, and as an entertaining pastime it cannot be too highly praised.

MOTHERS OF WOMAN'S DESIGN INVENTION KINKS IN HAIRPINS

Inspiration From The Thrift Plant

A LARGE percentage of modern patents are in respect of devices intended to help women, and it is often remarked that, considering this, the percentage of women inventors is very low. But, when women do invent something, that something is usually worth while, and becomes a success, whereas hundreds of the patents amongst the thousands applied for annually come to nothing. It is comparatively easy to compile a long list of important inventions standing to the credit of women.

Washing Machines And Hairpins

THE first washing machine, for instance, was invented by an American woman in 1867 although it has frequently been improved upon by male inventors since that date. Four years later another woman invented the kink in the hairpin which keeps it in the hair.

The romantic story of the woman who invented paper dress patterns was revealed by an inquiry in the correspondence columns of a newspaper some fifteen years ago. The inventor was a Mrs. Ellis, of England, who was then 96 years of age. She could not recall exactly in what year she invented the paper patterns, but in 1866 she had a flourishing business.

The idea arose when one day she cut out a paper dress for a customer. There followed an order from a Liverpool dress-maker, and then regular visits to Paris to see the latest fashions. The patterns were sold at five guineas a set, which included a coloured model that could be dressed and displayed on a dummy, and a number of flat patterns for cutting out. Today, paper patterns enable thousands of women to make their own dresses at home.

Crinkly Hair Becomes Straight

ONE of the most extraordinary inventions ever made by man or woman was that of Madame Walker, an American woman, who discovered a special lotion for 'making negroes' hair straight. Madame Walker was a charwoman, when she had a dream in which she was told that she could make a fortune by putting her lotion on the market. The dream came true, and she made £1,000,000 out of her invention, going to live eventually in a £50,000 house on the Hudson River, amongst the white millionaires.

The majority of patents taken out every year by women naturally concern the home, but it is not only with household inventions that women have succeeded. The daughter of Sir John Thornycroft invented a new design for motor engines. A special covering for the bottom of ships to prevent barnacles adhering was another invention to the credit of a woman.

Women inventors, like other inventors, come from all classes, and are of all ages. A famous patent agent told me that he had been surprised at times by the ingenuity and practicability of inventions brought to him by women who had not had the advantage of more than a very ordinary education.

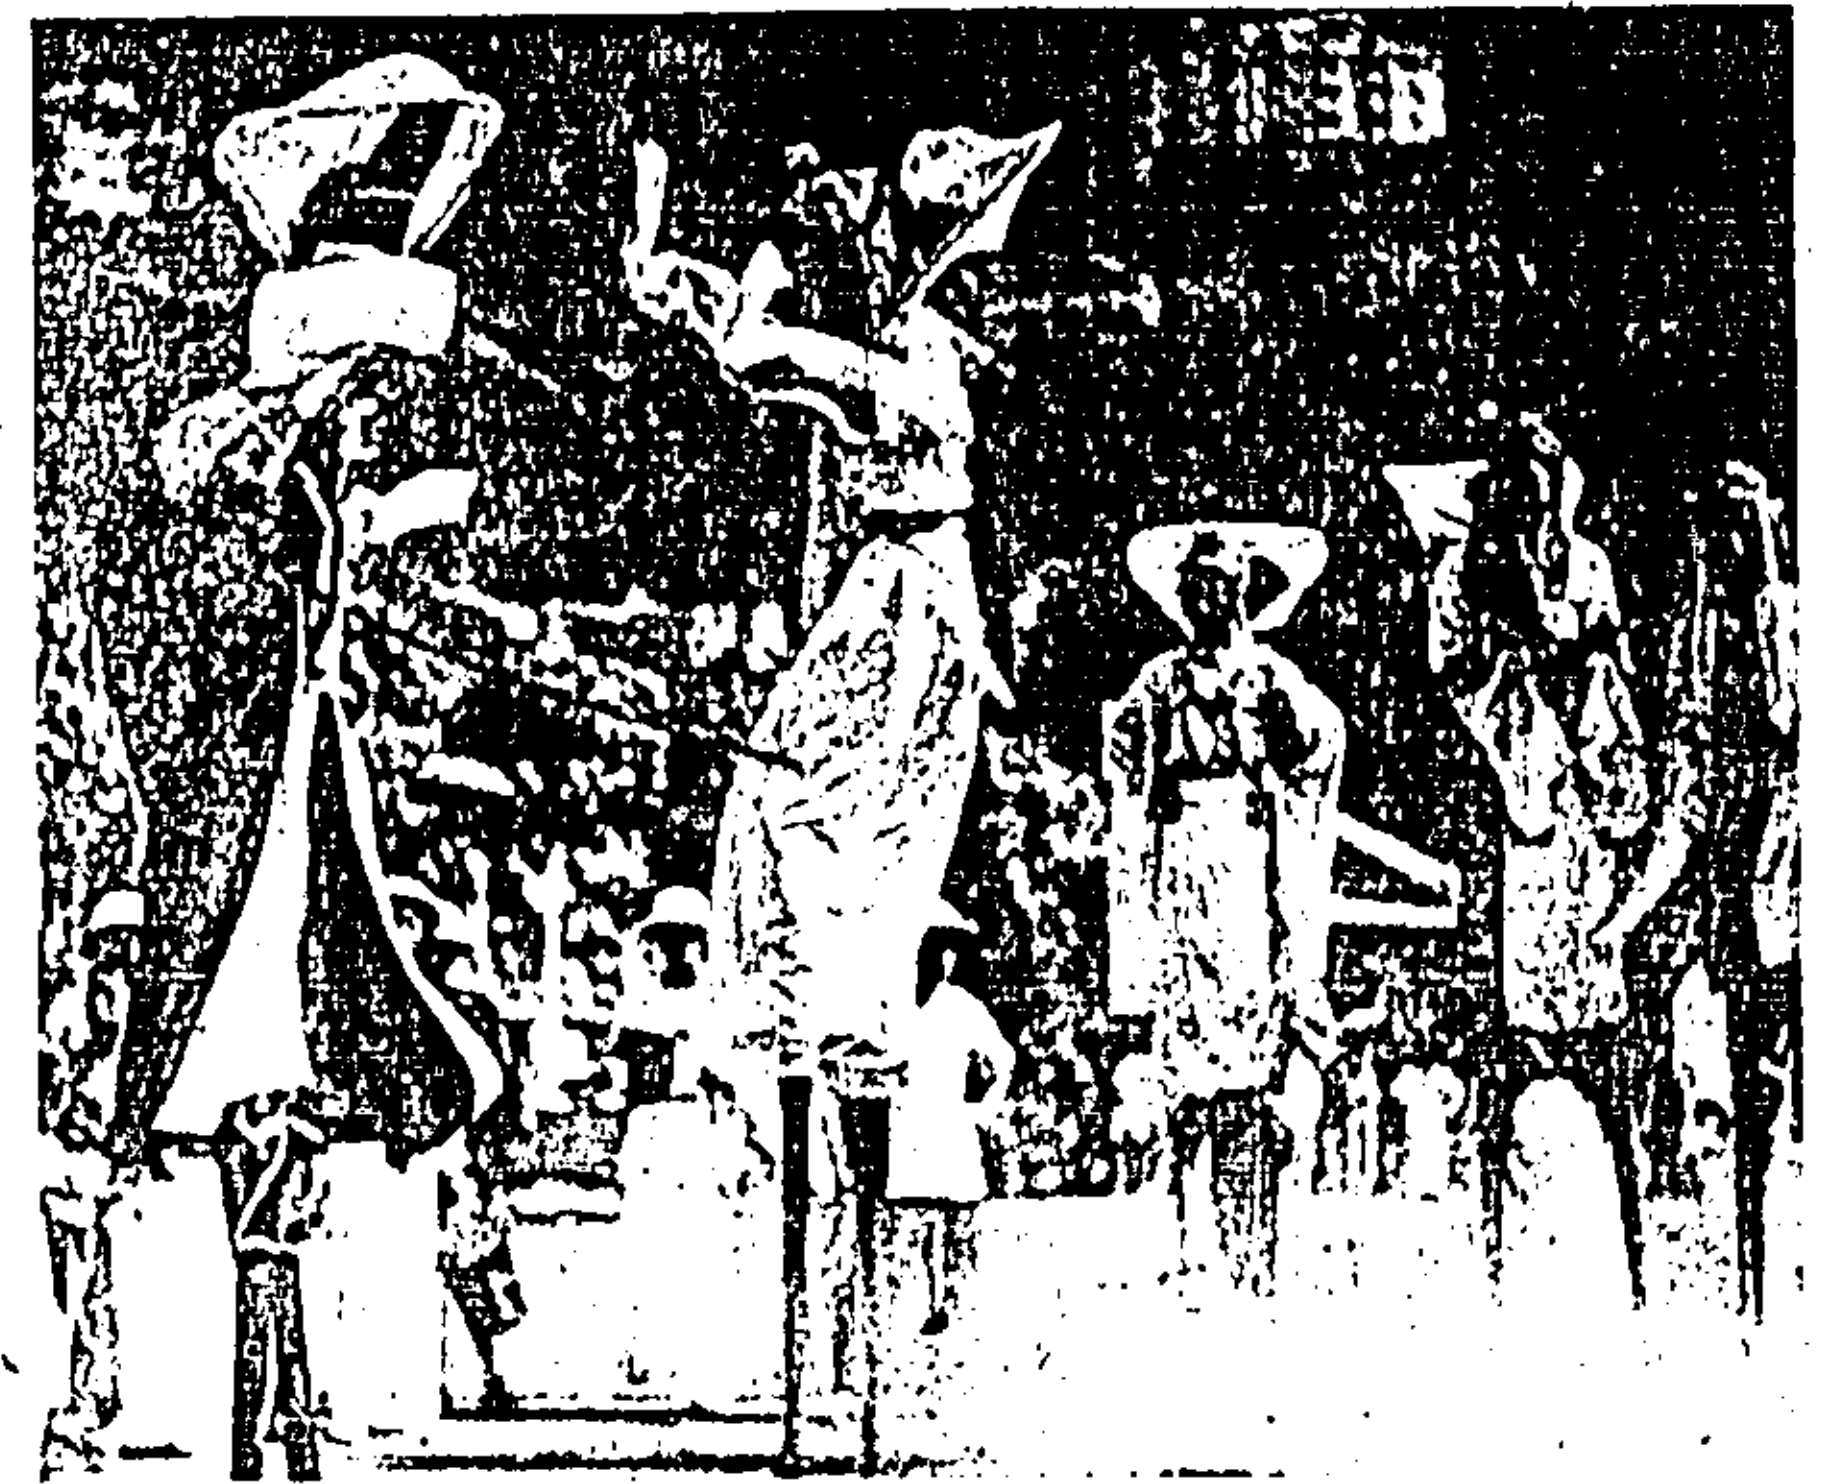

THE new twelve-pointed threepenny-bit, which is to be introduced into British currency in honour of the Coronation, will bear a design created by a woman—Miss Frances Madge Kitchener, niece of the late Lord Kitchener.

The thrift plant—which has blooms something like those of a tiny carnation—gave her inspiration for the design. The plant grows wild on the rich sea-coast turf of Devonshire, where Miss Kitchener often spends her holidays.

So she made a wax model of a spray of the thrift flowers. From that, she made a plaster cast and worked out the final design, which has been adopted for the reverse side of the coin, in place of the existing pattern of oak leaves and acorns.

On the obverse side, the coin will bear a portrait of the King's head, drawn by one of the Royal Mint officials.

About TOWN

Recessional

"THE Captains and the Kings depart." The mood of slipping into slacks and comfort after the gorgeous processions and the impressive ceremonies are safely brought to a conclusion naturally suggests Kipling's famous poem, but curiously enough it is not appropriate to a Coronation, for although it is etiquette for friendly sovereigns to attend a Jubilee or other anniversary, and still more a funeral, it is not customary to go to the coronation of a new King. A formal visit with full staff within the next year or two used to make quite a feature of the new monarch's life, and such visits had to be returned in equal state. Nowadays the number of crowned heads still entitled to wear their crowns is so reduced by the expulsions that followed the end of the big war that such official visits will be few and unimportant. The Scandinavian Royal families are so closely connected by marriage that they have been frequent visitors without any formality at all. The King of Italy is almost the only royal personage who is not related to King George VI., and it is not likely that "the forgotten man" would be entrusted with any important negotiations.

Royalties And Diplomacy

TWO generations ago nobody would have doubted that the customary royal visits were a great factor in the promotion of good relations between nations. Further back the same opinion about royal intermarriage would have been universal. How far was this theory justified? Enough time has passed for the publication of confidential papers that put us into a better position to judge than the contemporary historians, and the balance of opinion seems to be settling down to the opposite judgment.

In the old feudal days when people who lived within any tract of country passed over with the "fief" by strict laws of inheritance as if they were so many cattle, it was possible by prudent matrimonial policy to increase the range of one particular sovereignty, but it by no means followed that the newly acquired territory was a source of strength. The great example is of course the Austrian Empire, of which a satirist once wrote in some famous lines that while other States had to buy or conquer territory "tu, felix Austria, nube,"—do thou, lucky Austria, continue to marry. The physical results of politic marriages to the House of Habsburg were rather a warning than an example. "If you cast

Nature out with a fork she will still return." And the annexed nationalities, however convenient the "ramshackle Empire" may have been for trade and some other purposes were always restless and took the first chance of asserting their old distinctiveness. In our own history neither the marriage of Mary to Philip II. of Spain, nor of the first Charles to Henrietta Maria did anything to strengthen the throne. The slow growth of nationalism made it seem absurd to allow too much influence to such unions, and the religious wars created a suspicion of foreigners which amounted to active opposition when that difference of creed split the royal caste into two sections.

The Royal Caste

IN England there was never any law of caste, and the practice of exclusiveness ebbed and waned. Queen Victoria was greatly influenced by the ordinary German prejudice which was embodied in a set of hard and fast rules for the numerous families whose names were recorded in the Almanach der Gotha, but her stern control was rather tolerated than approved. It was responsible for the growth of some forgetfulness of the freedom actually allowed by our law, and the relaxation allowed by her son and grandson was popular. But it still remains a paradox of history that the "English" in the narrow sense of the word, the families of the great country houses in England itself, with their aristocracy which has jealously excluded strains of foreign blood, has been so loyal to a throne which has never been occupied by a family of "English" blood and origin. The old "blood royal" was always held to run in the veins of the Plantagenets, who were French. It was through marriage with a Plantagenet that Henry VII secured his throne, and he was Welsh. It was through the marriage of his daughter Margaret to the King of Scotland that the Welsh Tudors were succeeded by the Scots Stewarts, and it was by the marriage of Stewart heiresses that the throne passed to William of Orange and afterwards to the Elector of Hanover. Nothing short of the intense anti-German feeling of the war years sufficed to change the name of the dynasty from the unpopular "Saxe-Coburg-Gotha" to the "House of Windsor." Is it any wonder that many people speculate how much history would have been altered if the old "people's monarchy" had passed down from one male heir to another in regular descent? Our new King undoubtedly exercised his right of a free choice when he selected his own bride, but the paradox still was continued by his choice of the daughter of one of the old Scots families that are jocularly reputed to be descended from Noah.

Old Descent

CONTINUOUS male descent through several centuries of landowners is by no means rare as one might suppose. The late Mr. Round, who was recognised by all to be the greatest expert of genealogy, and who was called in from time to time as umpire in claims made to the House of Peers through the Committee of Privileges, made a list of several families of undisputed continuity as squires or yeomen from Saxon times. And not a hereditary title amongst them!

TOPICAL FASHIONS IN PICTURES

The style of a hat should fit the wearer, say stylists. Here are two examples. At top screen actress Joan Fontaine dons an on-the-face turban of paper-thin white straw with a roll of green, red and white chiffon. Bottom, Betty Grable sports a wisp of a black felt hat, very off-the-face, and accented by a flat pink gros-grain bow.

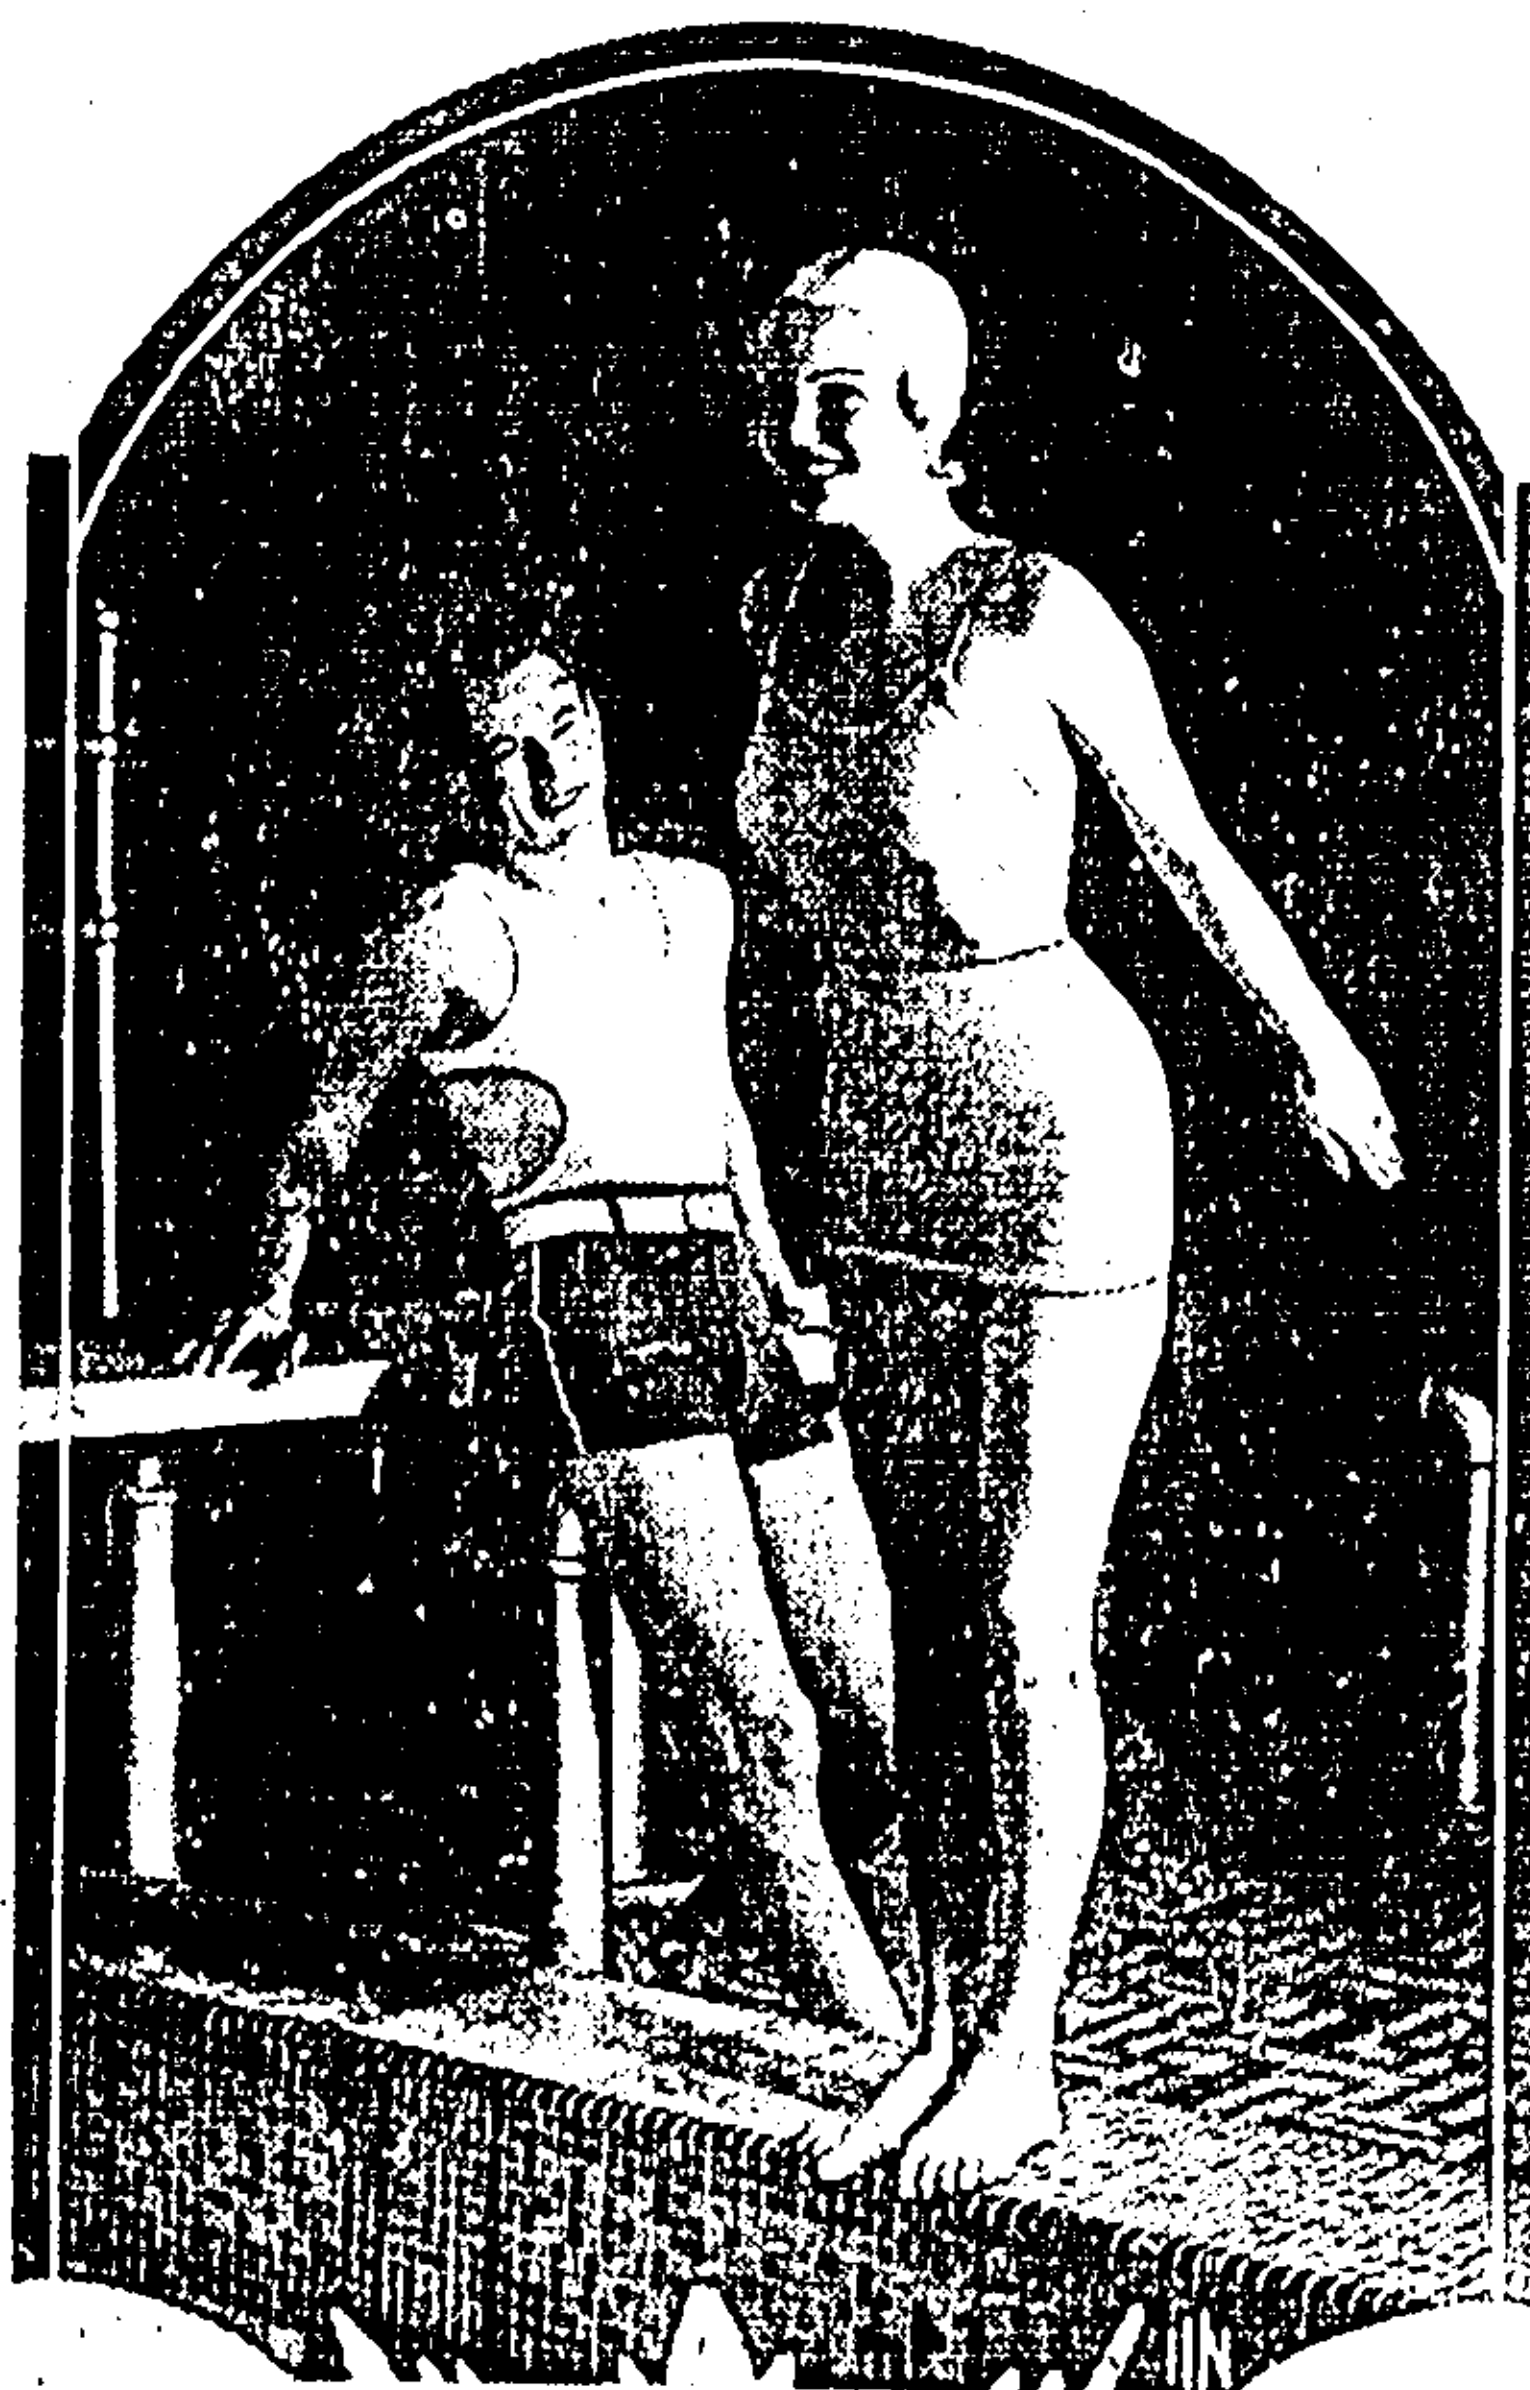

The bias effect ripple stitch in this knitted wool dressmaker bathing suit gives it a two-tone touch. The square neck line is given a V-effect by the bow-knot. The shoulder strap is composed of a series of embroidered flowers.

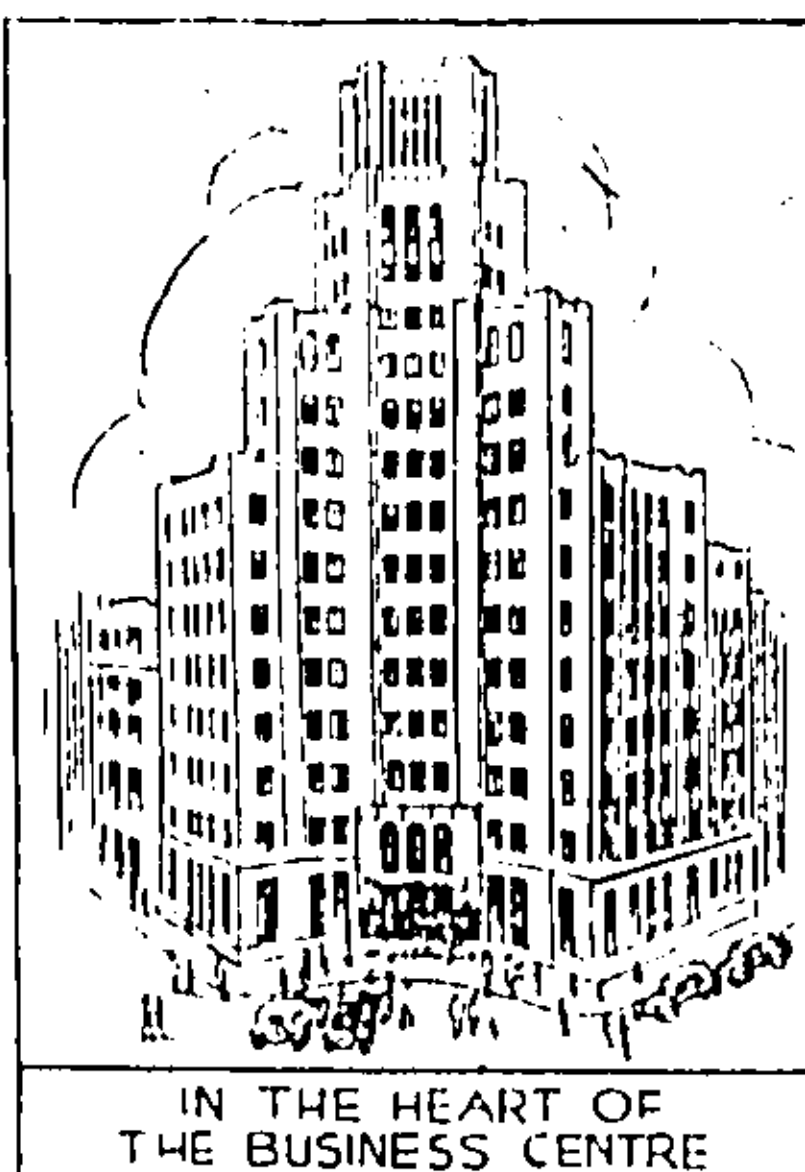

Robert Wadlow, 8 feet 9 inches in his socks, and weighing 450 pounds, is the biggest visitor ever to board the R.M.S. "Queen Mary." Wadlow, an attraction with the Ringling Brothers Circus, is here shown with his aunt, Miss Lora Perry, aboard the liner in New York. Miss Perry is of normal height.

Sports Chatter

I UNDERSTAND that the Colony will soon be visited by a badminton team representative of Malaya, which will be sent under the auspices of the Malayan Badminton Association. Our local Association have always been very reluctant to discuss the prospects of Interport badminton matches, but I hope that they will do everything possible to make the necessary arrangements for the Malayan visit to the Colony.

U.S.R.C. Tennis Loss

WING-Commodore A. G. Bishop, who played for the U.S.R.C. in the "A" Division of the Tennis League last season, will not be available this year as he is shortly going home. The return of L. Goldman last Thursday should, however, considerably strengthen the team.

Recreio Tennis Pairings

CLUB de Recreio have almost decided their League tennis team for the "A" Division and the final pairing has only to be decided. A. V. Gosano and A. V. Remedios, F. J. Remedios and J. J. Remedios and J. Goncalves and either H. A. Barros or C. A. Barretto will be the team.

No New Swimming Club?

THE formation or reorganisation of the Kowloon Swimming Club is most unlikely now that several intending members have joined other clubs. It is most likely that those left by themselves will join either the European Y.M.C.A. or the Victoria Recreation Club.

One Less Badminton Team?

THE Chinese "Y" will probably not be able to raise a team to compete in the Badminton League next season, for almost every one of their regular players are contemplating joining other clubs. This is the result of the difficulty they experienced in securing the court to practice during the past season.

To celebrate their winning the Colony Men's Doubles Badminton League Championship, the Hong Kong University Badminton Club will shortly hold a flannel dance at Eliot Hall.

No Interport For Stevens

IT is to be regretted that Stevens, of the Rifles, will be leaving with the Battalion at the end of the year as by his consistently good displays during the latter part of the season he would have been a serious contender for Interport Football honours next season.

Training For Games

NORMAN Lee, the South China swimmer, has been practising very seriously recently, not only for the Coronation Gala but in preparation for the Chinese National Games in October. At North Point last week he clocked 64.7 secs. for the 100 Metres, which bettered the National record.

Lewis Has Bad Luck

LIEUT. A. J. Lewis, of the Royal Welch Fusiliers, and one of the best short distance sprinters among the Army swimmers in the Colony, was unable to take part in the Coronation Swimming Gala owing to water on the knee. He is making splendid progress at the moment and should be seen in the water later on in the season.

All-Rounder Pays A Visit

A VERY fine all-round sportsman in the person of J. Chubb, of Poochow, arrived in the Colony last week for a short holiday. Chubb plays an exceptionally good game of golf, soccer and tennis. During a stay here some years ago, he was elected a visiting member of the K. C. C. and showed up very well against such tennis players as Teddy Fincher and Bertie Guest.

By the Judge

SOUTH China should have no difficulty in winning the Chinese Water-Polo League this season as they will have at their disposal practically the same team which has played together for the past two seasons. Norman Lee, H. Wing Lee and D. Sa have been the mainstay of the team in the past and A. Hussain will also probably be included in the team.

New Police Cricket Blood

THE Police Recreation Club, who were runners-up in the 1936-7 Second Division Cricket League, hope to do better next season as they have in Weir, Gunning and McDonald, at present at the Police Training School, three promising new cricketers.

Hunter Will Be Absentee

T. HUNTER, captain of the Police cricket team, will not be available next season as he goes on home leave before the start of the season.

Lieut. R. A. Barron, a member of the Royal Engineers' swimming team, is at present away from the Colony on local leave, otherwise he would have been a certainty for the British 300 Yards Free-Style Relay team.

Billiards Titlist Plays Bowls

A. J. OSMUND, the Colony billiards champion, has recently taken up bowls. He played for Recreio in the Third Division last week, while his brother, L. A. Osmund, turned out for the Kowloon Tong team.

Pau Entering Colony Events

J. Pau, the King's College badminton player who represented Craigengower in the junior division of the Lawn Bowls League last season, will be competing in the Colony Lawn Bowls Singles Championship this year. In the Open Pairs he will be partnered by N. P. Karanjia. A. M. Omar will also compete in the Colony Lawn Bowls Singles Championship this season, and will have his brother, U. M. Omar, as his partner in the Open Pairs.

Craigengower's Four Skips

CRAIGENGOWER will have four official entries in the Colony Open Rinks Championship, to be skipped by B. W. Bradbury, J. Cavanagh, V. N. Atienza and U. M. Omar.

One of the most improved military swimmers is Mr. Seary, who last year won all the boys' events at the H.K. Command Swimming Championships.

Peers Takes Up Tennis

W. E. PEERS, the Rugger Interporter, is playing a great deal of tennis in the off season. He has entered for the Junior Championship at the Kowloon C.C.

Mrs. Guest's Comeback

MRS. A. E. P. Guest, wife of the well-known hockey and tennis player and a sister of E. F. and E. C. Fincher, has resumed her tennis activities. She is now playing regularly at the Kowloon C.C. and is rapidly regaining her old form.

Rev. J. R. Higgs, vicar of St. Andrew's, was in his 'Varsity days an excellent hockey forward. His sporting activities are now confined to tennis and swimming.

Kowloon Tong's Gain

A. SPARY is the latest Kowloon C.C. lawn bowler to go over to the ranks of the Kowloon Tong Club. A large proportion of the League team of this Club is now composed of K.C.C. members or former members.

Miss Bliss Goes On Leave

MISS Eileen Bliss, who has been prominently associated with St. Andrew's Club, both in the badminton and hockey sections, left for England a week ago last Saturday on furlough.

Jockey Seeks Badminton Laurels

G. U. da ROZA, one-time leading local jockey, is now playing a great deal of badminton. He is considered to have an excellent chance of winning the trophy presented by his cousin, A. W. da Roza, for the champion singles player of the Kowloon Tong Club.

K.D.R.C. Pairs Combination

J. McKELVIE, of the Kowloon Docks Recreation Club, will be partnered by J. V. Ramsay in the Colony Open Lawn Bowls Pairs Competition.

Howard Branches Out

W. J. HOWARD, who last season was in charge of tennis at Craigengower, has now enlarged his sporting activities to include badminton and lawn bowls.

The Liga Portuguesa soccer team, above, finished up joint runners-up with the R.A.O.C. in the Third Division of the League. Left to right (standing) P. M. Xavier (Manager), H. Sousa, J. A. Remedios, A. M. Quinn, L. A. Gomes (Captain), M. A. Franco; Pereira, R. Ribeiro and E. Lawrence; (Sitting) A. Ablong, H. Santos, C. Santos, H. Remedios and F. Santos.

Lam's Appointment

C. W. LAM, the Craigengower cricketer, is to be congratulated on his recent appointment to the post of Superintendent of Tung Wah Eastern Hospital. He is residing at the Valley and the close proximity of the rinks has induced him to take a keen interest in lawn bowls.

Galvin, of the Police, is often seen on the tennis court of the Police Club and I understand he will be playing in the League this season if duty permits.

THE Army are endeavouring to get Mr. Melbourne Inman and Mr. Horace Lindrum, the snooker wizard and holder of the world's largest break, to give an exhibition for the Services while in Hong Kong. As there is a great deal of billiards and snooker played in the Colony, this event, if it materialises, will be welcomed by all Servicemen.

Samy Turns To Bowls

A. R. M. SAMY, who formerly did a lot of soccer refereeing, but who has since given it up owing to pressure of work, has recently taken up bowls. He should find a place in the Indian Recreation Club team soon.

W. Mair and E. Post, the Police Recreation Club senior skips, have paired up for the Open Pairs Bowls Championship this season.

COORDINATED EMPIRE RE-ARMAMENT

Important Plan Envisaged

American Cruiser Aids Refugees

Barcelona, Yesterday.
The United States cruiser Raleigh, which had been sent to Spain for the protection of American shipping, yesterday embarked nearly 200 refugees at Almeria.

The refugees, who include 145 Cubans, four Uruguayans, four Chileans, one Englishman and an American Negro, will be brought to Marseilles.

In the meantime, a statement issued by the British consul at Bilbao, who is now in St. Jean de Luz, points to the difficulties impeding the evacuation of women and children from Bilbao.

Most of the refugees refused to leave the town, he says, and while the Basque Government declared that about 25,000 women and children should be evacuated, actually only from 6,000 to 7,000 could be removed to safety.—Trans-Ocean.

Budapest, To-day.
Hungary is the latest nation to join in the cry for equality in armaments.

Yesterday the War Minister, General Roeder, in a speech in Parliament, formulated the Hungarian demands for equal rights in the field of armaments.

He said the claim was not purely military but also political. If Hungary had not yet realised her right to equality in arms it did not mean that she renounced solution of the question.

The Government would take the necessary steps at the proper moment, he declared.—Trans-Ocean.

Interchangeable Equipment

Causes Of World Unrest For Early Study

London, Yesterday.

Coordination in construction for defence purposes is predicted as a likely outcome of the Imperial Conference. The programme of unification envisaged would provide for the manufacture and supply of precisely similar guns, munitions, mechanised units, and engine parts for naval, military and air force purposes in all parts of the Empire.

THE SCHEME WOULD ENABLE DOMINIONS AND BRITISH EQUIPMENT TO BE READILY INTERCHANGEABLE AND AVAILABLE FOR TRANSFER SHOULD ANY ONE PART OF THE EMPIRE BE ATTACKED.

THERE IS GENERAL ACCEPTANCE AMONG THE DOMINIONS THAT IN THE EVENT OF BRITAIN BECOMING INVOLVED IN WAR, A DECLARATION OF NEUTRALITY BY ONE OF THE DOMINIONS WOULD NOT BE RESPECTED BY THE ENEMY.

Foreign policy and defence of the Empire were the main points stressed by the Premier, Mr. Stanley Baldwin, in his opening address at the Conference.

Mr. Baldwin reminded the assembled delegates that in arriving at solution to the various problems confronting them they were responsible not only to their own countries but to the entire world.

On the question of armaments, Mr. Baldwin declared: "We regret having been forced to rearm but we had no choice."

"We have assumed this burden in order to guarantee the security of this island, which is still the centre of the Empire, and also in order to fulfil our duty as a loyal member of the League of Nations."

Mr. W. L. Mackenzie King said that the equality of rights that existed between the different members of the Empire, as well as between them and other countries of the world, constituted an important factor in the peace of the world. He concluded with the assurance that the Dominions would co-operate in furthering the cause of peace.

The Australian Premier, Mr. J. A. Lyons, said that unification of the Empire was never so complete as at present, but that the experiences of the last few years had proved that some of the ideals embodied in the League of Nations could not be realised.

UNIFIED POLICY

The Australian Government was of the opinion that the fundamental principles governing the foreign policy of the Empire and the position of the League of Nations in world politics, should be thoroughly examined and a formula developed which would lead to unified Empire policy.

The Dominions should realise that their independent status involved a high degree of responsibility.

They should demonstrate their capability to defend themselves and to play a role in the furthering of peace in the world.

CONFERENCE ADJOURNS

Following appointment of two sub-committees for economic questions and for air traffic, the conference adjourned until Wednesday, when the serious business will be attacked by the committees.

Purely technical matters will be dealt with by the sub-committees, which will not convene until Thursday.

The chief committee, composed of the leaders of the various delegations and their most intimate collaborators, will assemble on Wednesday, to examine, in Mr. Baldwin's words, "the main causes of the present international unrest and to exchange views on the possibility of the Empire as a whole contributing towards reduction or complete removal of such cause."—Trans-Ocean.

DIPLOMATIC TALKS IN LONDON

Wide Exchanges Of Ideas

London, Yesterday.

The presence in London for the Coronation of the Prime Ministers or Foreign Ministers of many countries has afforded an opportunity of which the Foreign Secretary has taken advantage, to renew contacts established at Geneva or on his visits to European capitals. Mr. Eden has had a number of valuable conversations of quite a general character and it is probable that visiting statesmen, among themselves, have taken the chance to meet and exchange ideas in a way which may be none the less fruitful for being quite informal.

In continuation of this series of interviews, Mr. Eden yesterday afternoon received the Turkish Prime Minister, General Ismet Inönü, at the Foreign Office.—British Wireless.

BRIDGE NOTES

BY ELY CULBERTSON

The Reaching Of A Grand Slam

OVER a conventional four-trump bid, the partner, when holding the two remaining Aces, is compelled to respond with five notrump, no matter how weak his outside hand. This rule is almost as rigid as the rule that an opening two-bid cannot be dropped until game is reached. There is one exception to the rule, however, and this exception is so obvious that I am afraid I have my tongue in my cheek when mentioning it. If, when your partner bids four notrump, you now have sufficient information immediately to bid seven without any further exploration, it is naturally superfluous to respond first with five notrump, as in immediately jumping to seven you are reaching the objective to which the four-five notrump convention is but a stepping stone.

The hand below shows a well bid grand slam which was reached by the four-five notrump convention. North, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

1—This hand also fulfils the requirements for an opening three-bid in a major suit when vulnerable. I personally agree with the one-bid, however. If my partner is too weak to respond to one spade, there probably is no game in the hand and in addition there is always the possibility that one of the opponents will reopen.

2—The obvious response.

3—A very fine bid by North. Since a jump rebid to three spades, although practically forcing, does permit a pass, four spades, which automatically takes the bidding to game, must be recognized as a stronger bid. Any time that you bid three spades and your partner raises to four, you naturally must pass, as you would otherwise be guilty of "trapping." If, on the other hand, you immediately bid four spades yourself, after having heard merely a simple takeout from your partner, you are showing a very strong hand with a solid or nearly solid trump suit and are offering a slam try.

4—South recognizes the full import of North's four-spade bid. He accepts the slam try by returning one of his own. Having two Aces and the King of a bid suit (clubs), South makes the conventional four-notrump bid.

5—North has heard all he needs to hear. South's four-notrump bid definitely marked the South player with the Ace of hearts and the Ace-King of clubs. In addition, since South took out with two clubs on the first round of the bidding, he is reasonably certain to have a five-card club suit. North therefore knows that at the very worst his grand slam contract will depend on setting up an extra club trick on which to discard his losing diamond, and this can almost surely be done. He accordingly decides to temporize no further, and immediately contracts for the grand slam.

In the play North, of course, tackled the club suit immediately after drawing trumps. When East's Jack dropped on the second round dummy's low clubs became high and North was able to claim the balance.

Whatever became of the powerhouse notrump that swept like a minor scourge through New York and its environs about a year ago, ravaging the peaceful countryside and leaving in its wake destruction and misery?—writes A. Moyse, Jr., of New York. He continues: Bridge players by the score lost their homes, and tiny tots went barefoot while their parents went temporarily insane. Science has never satisfactorily explained nor definitely traced the origin of this strange and horrible plague.

Whatever its origin, the powerhouse notrump, although of mercifully short duration, wreaked terrible havoc. Although its symptoms were so unmistakable as to make an early diagnosis very easy, no cure could be found for it, and in each separate case the fever had to run its course.

One of the strangest effects of the plague was that its sufferers were comparatively rational when alone or with healthy people, but no sooner did small groups of victims form than the scene became gruesome—a sort of orgiastic insanity crept in. A pitiful kind of bubble almost in the form of a solemn ritual, would take place:

First victim: "How are your notrumps, partner?"

Second victim (a strange, fanatical gleam in his eye; his shoulders thrown back, his chin lifted proudly): "They're powerhouses! Just powerhouses... How are yours?"

This, being exactly what the first victim had been waiting for, was literally pounced on. "My notrumps," he would state impressively, and with a ringing note of triumph, "are simply enormous! Enormous! You can raise me on a ten-spot."

At this point the two prospective opponents, not to be outdone, would enter the conversation, and the adjectives used in defence of their own notrumps—"Stupendous," "Colossal," "Gargantuan"—could not fail to impress victims one and two that they were up against no mere palookas.

One of them, however, would invariably clinch the victory for his side with the conclusive statement that his own personal notrumps were simply broodingnagian, and, in an ensuing atmosphere of mutual awe and admiration, the game would begin. Strangely enough, Mr. Moyse reports in conclusion, no one of them bid an original notrump for weeks on end.

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE MAY ABOLISH BRITISH SUBJECT

New And Better Term Urged

London, Saturday. There is a strong impression that after the Imperial Conference the designation of "British subject" may be replaced by a more general description to denote the common status enjoyed by all members of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Nationality will, of course, figure largely on the Imperial Conference agenda, and although no Government has any intention of interfering with the position enjoyed by the nationals of all the Dominions, the view is held in some quarters that "British subject" does not correctly define the status as it is understood today.

TO PLEASE ALL

It has been suggested that a more general term such as "Subject of the King" would be more in accord with the present constitutional position and would, without altering the effect of the general status, raise no misunderstanding on such questions as that of the divisibility of the Crown.

It is clear, however, that any decision along these lines can only be reached as a result of general agreement, and though it is understood that South Africa intends to raise the issue, there is no reason to believe that the Union Government will force a decision.

Lion Symbol For Empire Exhibition

Edinburgh, Saturday.

A lion rampant is to be the symbol of next year's Empire Exhibition in Scotland.

This was announced by Lord Elgin, president of the Exhibition, at a luncheon in Edinburgh.

As the Exhibition is taking place in Scotland, the design is based on the traditional Scottish lion, and will be printed in the appropriate red. But the Scottish lion has been drastically conventionalised and modernised, as was the Wembley lion in the days of the British Empire Exhibition of 1924. By the addition of a number of white lines a tartan effect is suggested, which gives the emblem a distinction of its own.

German Trade With British Empire Up

Germany's imports from and exports to the British Empire increased during March.

A new feature in the statistics, says Reuter, is a special section for "German Colonies under mandates," and a footnote to the British Empire section states that this "includes German colonies."

Total March imports were about £34,941,700—an increase of £5,125,000 on February figures. Exports were £38,501,700—increased £4,691,300.

Red, White And Blue "Goldfish"

London, Saturday.

Red, white and blue "goldfish"—this patriotic colour scheme has been achieved through careful breeding by Mr. A. Cree, a rural district councillor at Arlesey, Bedfordshire. The colours are distinct and clearly marked.

Mr. Cree exhibited the fish on the village green on Coronation Day as part of the local celebrations.

He still has another ambition to satisfy. His goldfish goal is a perfect blue specimen, and he hopes to breed one in the near future.

He has some thousands of fish in tanks and ponds in his back garden. — Reuter.

S.-WEST AFRICA PROCLAMATION

"No Nazi Can Reasonably Complain"

London, Saturday.

"No Nazi can reasonably complain of any limitation in the political freedom of people," says the "Daily Herald" in a leader on the South-West Africa proclamation. "They are out of court from the start unless they are prepared, in denouncing General Hertzog, simultaneously to condemn Herr Hitler."

The paper adds that the action taken savours too much of Nazism itself. Its discrimination against "foreigners" is dead against the whole spirit of the mandatory system. It seems at best a pretty crude way of handling a difficult problem.

NEW 3-POWER PLAN

London, Saturday.

BRITAIN, France and the United States have reached an accord on a definite line of tactical manoeuvres and preliminary action is to be taken to prepare the ground for a future agreement on permanent monetary stabilisation; a settlement of war debts; tariff and trade adjustments; and, the fixing of prices of essential commodities, it is believed here.

The accord does not mean that Britain, France and the United States have reached an understanding or agreed on any details of the four major problems to be solved as outlined above. But the three countries have decided that certain international economic and financial factors have to be corrected and modified before a stage can be reached in which final negotiations for a return to the gold standard, a settlement of European war indebtedness to the United States, and reduction of traffic barriers can achieve success.

Secret negotiations and moves have been going on between the three capitals behind the facade of the Sugar Conference.

The Banks of England and France and the Federal Reserve Bank are playing important hidden roles with Mr. Morgenthau and Mr. Montagu Norman directing the moves corollary to moves by President Roosevelt, Mr. Walter Runciman, Mr. Neville Chamberlain and M. Leon Blum.

President Roosevelt, Mr. Chamberlain and M. Blum are anxious to "shake out" the speculative inflated price boom of metals and other stocks resulting from the rearmament programmes of Britain and France.

This policy is in line with Mr. Roosevelt's industrial "morality" code, M. Blum's programme and Mr. Baldwin's promise that there will be no rearmament profiteering racket, and seeks to benefit such commodities as rubber, oil and sugar.

Other steps contemplated in the course of the next few weeks and months are:

The circulation of rumours and inspired comment that steps are being taken by Britain and France to settle their war debts with the United States.

A joint statement by the United States, Britain and France on the working and actions of the three equalisation funds.

Multilateral statements regarding trade objectives and tariff arrangements to include Soviet Russia and

The circulation of statements touching on the necessity for a return from a de facto gold standard to a de jure gold standard.

Thus international and national opinion is to be prepared for the major objectives of economic and financial movements and for the correction of existing tendencies so that negotiations, which will in the meantime be started slowly may lead to a successful conclusion.

SWEDE WHO RULES OVER A MONGOL STATE

ALL quiet in the Mongolian State of Inchan. The State's ruler is one of the most remarkable men of our time. He is neither Mongolian nor a Manchu, but a Swede. His name is Franz August Larson.

Forty-five years ago, a young man of 23 left Sweden to teach the gospels in inner Mongolia as a member of the Swedish Mission. When Larson had preached for seven years and had become acquainted with the country and its population, he gave up this mission and became something very different. A dealer in horses!

Princes Ask His Advice

He adapted himself to the life of the natives, rode hundreds of miles with his herds of horses, made friends with the Mongolian chiefs, gained admission to districts that had been strictly closed to the white man, did excellent business and amassed a fortune for himself trading in all parts of Mongolia; he organized caravans, which not only took horses with them, but all kinds of merchandise as well.

Mongolian princes came to his headquarters at Urga and Kalgan to buy horses and camels, and, greatly appreciating his sound advice and accurate judgment, they often took his counsel in important political questions. Finally, the "Living Buddha" of all Mongolian Buddhists, the Chutuku of Urga, Bogdo Gegen, invited him to his court. In 1911, when the Chutuku became the ruler of Independent Mongolia, he conferred the rank of a Mongolian Dukedom on his friend, Larson.

Facing A Difficult Task

However, having been made a duke did not give Larson the necessary duchy. As he was not presented with a territory over which to rule, he just had to look for the himself! Nevertheless, it was not so difficult, as he could simply choose any uninhabited part of the country, draw up his frontiers and start cultivating the soil. When he had done that nobody, according to Mongolian law could contend his right to the property as well as the only common property in Mongolia.

The "conquest" of Larson's duchy turned out to be rather a difficult task. There were heavy snow storms in winter, which made his land practically inaccessible, there were the scorching hot days in summer which caused drought and destruction of crops. On the other hand, there was plenty of game, and in winter time herds of wolves came over from the Siberian woods.

After two years Larson fortunately discovered gold veins in the soil of his land, and, financed by a Russian and French company he started to exploit them. Ten thousand coolies worked in his gold mines, but eventually it turned out that mining was not profitable enough as work for it could be carried on only during four months of the year.

Then came the Russian Revolution. Mongolia was the battlefield of Red and White armies. Baron von Ungern-Sternberg, whose name has become legendary in the Far East, found a White-Russian-Mongolian State of its own, which extended from West Manchuria through Mongolia up to Daungarei. Larson became his chief adviser and financier. But when Ungern-Sternberg's rule collapsed, and the Communists marched in, Larson, together with the other supporters of the new State, had to flee for their lives, Larson having to abandon all his property.

Recognition Of New State

With some faithful Mongolians he retired into a remote part of the Inchan Mountains, where he started a sheep farm. An ancient and deserted Llama Temple became his residence. He built a high fall around it and lives quietly in his voluntary exile. His nearest neighbours are miles distant from him. It is a rare event if visitors come to his "duchy." The quiet and peaceful life at Inchan has attracted many more Mongolians since, and his "subjects" now number several hundreds.

His farm is slowly but surely growing larger and larger, and so are the profits.

When Pu-yi became Emperor of Manchukuo he formerly confirmed the legality of the "Duchy of Inchan" and the ruler of the miniature State. Thus the white duke's position among the Mongolians has become legalised.

DOMESTIC SQUABBLE

WHOSE FAULT—MINE OR MY HUSBAND'S?
Somehow when we were first married John's little habits didn't worry me, but now...

Stop, John! I hate you dabbing me with your shaving brush—it's not funny!

You used to be amused at it once, you know!

Oh! Meryl! Has your Charley irritating little habits that drive you mad too? Honestly, I don't think I can stand it much longer.

Good heavens, every man's got little habits and mannerisms. I'm sure we all have, you know I really think...

Gosh! Perhaps I do, get upset easily. I feel so nervous and run down these days. I might see a doctor as Mary suggested.

Horlick's! So that's what the doctor recommended!

...Yes I do wake up feeling I've only had a few hours sleep, doctor.

That seems to be the trouble. You go on using up energy all night. If this isn't replaced, you wake up tired and never catch up, so to speak—result—Night Starvation. You get irritable, fussy, short-tempered. I advise you...

SIX WEEKS LATER

It's years since we went for a walk in the country darling—just like old times, isn't it?

...and I'm enjoying every minute of it.

HORLICK'S GUARDS AGAINST NIGHT-STARVATION

THIS MEANS YOU SLEEP SOUNDLY. WAKE REFRESHED, AND HAVE EXTRA ENERGY ALL DAY

YOU can't get any fun out of life if everything gets on your nerves. In itself, that's a sign that you haven't the energy to cope with even trivial things. Probably you're not replacing, while you sleep, the energy used up—Night Starvation, in fact.

Make your sleep effective with a regular cup of Horlick's at bedtime. Horlick's builds up your energy and keeps you fit and active. It's economical, too—just add water, the milk is in it.

ABLE AMAZON RUNS UNPLACED IN CORONATION HANDICAP

Strathroy Defies Handicapper With Plucky Effort

MR. BLACK RIDES FOUR WINNERS

MR. MACGREGOR HEADS OWNERS' LIST

MOUNTAIN VIEW SURPRISES

The outstanding feature of the first day of the Fifth Extra Race Meeting of the Jockey Club yesterday was the dismal failure of Able Amazon, the former Australian pony champion. Receiving a 21 lbs. weight advantage from Strathroy, it failed to place, being beaten by Strathroy and two 1937 ponies, Lancashire Chips and Gypsy Love.

The best piece of riding was that of Mr. Donald Black, who caused an upset in the May Handicap by piloting Mr. L. Dunbar's Wild Life first past the post ahead of King's Warden, the hot favourite in the absence of Happy Eve. Lying last at the Rock Mr. Black sent Wild Life into the lead at the 1 1/4 mile post with a great burst and drew away rapidly. King's Warden's jockey, Mr. S. C. Liang, was taken completely by surprise and even the whip could not bring the favourite any closer than three lengths to Wild Life at the finishing post. The time, 2:26.1, was 0.02.1 outside Liberty Bay's record.

Mr. Black enjoyed another personal triumph in the Coronation Handicap when he brought Mr. J. F. Macgregor's Strathroy home a length ahead of Lancashire Chips, despite a weight concession of 21 lbs. Taking the lead at the Rock, Strathroy responded perfectly and was leading by five lengths on entering the home straight. Lancashire Chips, however, offered a serious challenge over the last furlong and very nearly brought off a surprise win as it was catching up with every stride. After the race the Coronation Cup was presented to Mr. J. F. Macgregor by Mr. M. T. Johnson, Chairman of the Stewards.

Not satisfied with these two successes Mr. Black gave Sir Vandeleur Grayburn an unexpected Coronation present when he won the Lead Mine Handicap on Tyne as the result of a powerful finishing burst over the last furlong, punters again being caught napping. It was a spectacular win and produced a $42.50 dividend.

Mr. Black, who rode his fourth winner in the last race, headed the jockey's list with four firsts and a second in eight starts, while Mr. B. A. Proulx was placed in all his six engagements. Mr. J. F. Macgregor was the leading owner, securing two wins in three races.

Good Dividends
Dividends were quite satisfactory. Mountain View (Mr. Botelho) paying $90.70 for its second place in the last race, while the combination of National Anthem (Mr. Wood) and Katinka (Mr. Ralph) paid $122.50 on the "Daily Double." On a hard track and in hot weather only three favourites won—Rob Roy, Strathroy and Shipmaster.

Cash sweeps, however, were surprisingly poor, when considering the very fair crowd present, three first prizes being under four figures and the $2 sweep providing only $1,960 for the first prize. It is expected, however, that tomorrow's meeting will show a big improvement.

Mr. N. Deitz, who injured his hand when riding at the Spring Meeting of the Shanghai Race Club, was present at yesterday's Meeting, although he did not ride, his arm being in a sling.

To-morrow's Two Big Races

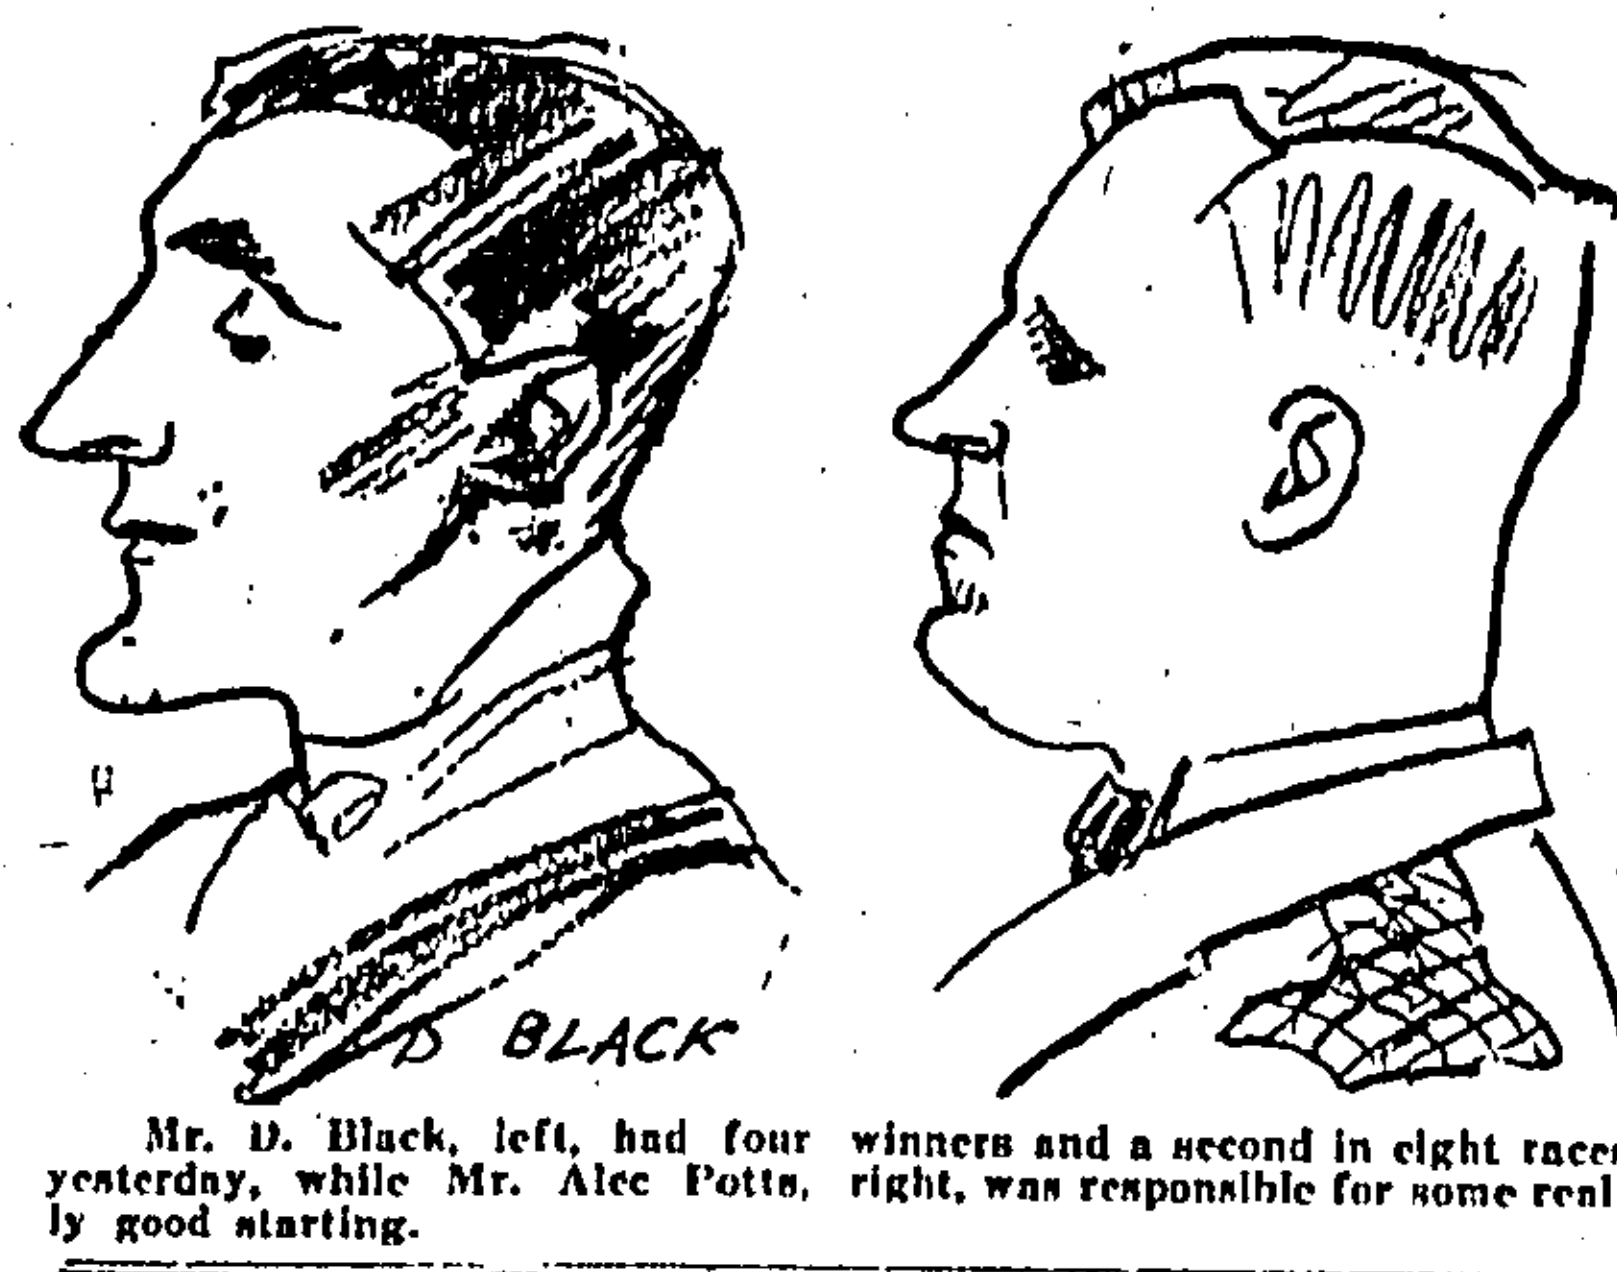

(By "THE JUDGE")

For the second day of the Fifth Extra Race Meeting, to be held tomorrow, the Hong Kong Jockey Club have arranged two particularly interesting events, the Coronation Plate and Coronation Cup. The Coronation Plate is confined to Griffins under certain conditions, and the Coronation Cup will be contested by subscription Griffins of this season.

The Coronation Plate will be decided over the Champions distance and is reserved for such ponies that have not won more than $2,500 in stakes since the 1st January, 1937. Consequently, King's Warden, Bear Cat, and even Eve are debarred, and in their absence an interesting struggle should ensue among the other ponies that have been entered.

DIANA BAY'S RACE?
A glance at the entries would seem to indicate that Diana Bay, with Mr. Don Black up, will not have much opposition. Since its defeat in the Champions at the Annual Meeting, Diana Bay has not made an appearance, and the long rest which it has enjoyed should prove of benefit. This grand old mare is now well advanced in years, and to be called upon to run over 1 1/4 miles on a hot day may slightly hamper its chances, especially when it is realised that Cosack's Beauty is at the moment extremely fit.

GORDITO FAVOURED
The Coronation Cup should prove the more interesting of the two main events and, although it would seem that Gordito, the champion subscription Griffin of this season, should walk away with the race, I think that Pagan Love will give it a good run in view of the fact that the distance is over one mile. Gordito will be taken out by Mr. S. C. Liang, and Pagan Love will have the benefit of Mr. H. C. Pih's long experience. These two ponies met before in a race and Pagan Love was beaten. It was created when Pagan Love won by a short head. There is, however, no doubt whatever that Gordito is the superior pony, and its ability in serving up a fast last quarter will prove the deciding factor. The third place should be fought out between Coronation Day and Shipmaster, the former having a slight advantage.

SIAMESE BADMINTON PARTY COMING

ARRIVING ON S.S. HIRAM

PROGRAMME NOT YET DECIDED

The team of Siamese badminton players which left Siam last week en route to the Colony, are expected to arrive some time to-day on the S.S. Hiram.

Coming at the invitation of Mr. Vilas Oatnanda, Siamese Trade Commissioner, the team consists of the following players:—Chart Shaw (Captain), Choot Shaw, P. Ran Sit, B. Ban Luo, B. Ban Chong and J. Chome, several of whom are among the leading exponents of the game in Siam.

No programme has, as yet, been arranged. Mr. Oatnanda informed the Sunday Herald yesterday morning. After the players have rested a few days, it will be ascertained what their wishes are with regard to matches, and arrangements will then be made, as near as possible in accordance with them.

The team will stay for a short period in Hong Kong and there is a possibility that they will travel further North later on.

H.K.F.A. SHOW THEIR APPRECIATION

Referees' Body Thanked

The following letter has been sent by the Secretary of the Hong Kong Football Association to D. Kossick Esq., Hon. Sec. of the Referees' Association:

Dear Sir,—At a meeting of the Council of the Hong Kong Football Association held on May 8, 1937, it was felt, now the season has concluded, that the thanks of the Council should be extended to all Officials who so readily responded when approached to officiate in Charity Competition games.

These were very numerous during the past season, and on no occasion was an Official appealed to, in vain.

I should be glad, therefore if you would convey the sincere thanks of the Council to your members.

Yours faithfully,
Sd. CHAS. D. CARTER,
(Hon. Secretary).

PUI CHING IN TWO BASEBALL GAMES TO-DAY

Will Meet Japanese: Then Volunteers

DEFENCE CORPS STRENGTHENED

Two good baseball games should be seen at Caroline Hill this morning, when the Pui Ching Academy, the champions, encounter the Nippon Club at 9.30 a.m., and later meet the Volunteers.

The Pui Ching Academy will be considerably strengthened this season by several players from the U.S.S. Minutemen, now stationed at Canton. The Japanese, who with the Volunteers were runners-up last season, are fielding their best side, and, provided Koga, the pitcher, is in form, they should fully extend the champions. Amasaki will relieve Koga, if necessary, while Takeda will be behind the plate.

VOLUNTEERS STRONGER

The Volunteers have been strengthened by the return of D. Leonard, A. Hussain and V. Costa. This has enabled them to field the same infield as last season, though Mendonca has been preferred to V. Costa at first base, probably for his batting, as there is not much difference in the fielding of both.

Whether the Volunteers win or not is dependent on whether Bowen, who is injured, will be able to play. H. Campion is the reserve pitcher, but is lacking in experience.

The following are the teams:
Volunteers:—Bowen or Campos (p), Wing Lee (c), Mendonca (1st b), Beltrao (2nd b), A. Hussain (3rd b), D. Leonard (s.s.), Pereira or Sa (l.f.), S. Leonard (c.f.) and N. Leonard (r.f.).
Substitutes:—Costa, Abbas Ismail and Delgado.

Nippon Club:—Amasaki (p), Yasuda (c), Koga (1st b), Nakamoto (2nd b), Kato (3rd b), Mikuni (s.s.), Takeda (l.f.), Yamasaki (c.f.), Iwata (r.f.).

ULSTERS PLAY AT NIGHT

Share Four Goals On Floodlit Field

Manila, Yesterday.
The Royal Ulster Rifles' soccer team, winners of the First Division of the Hong Kong Football Association League, last night shared four goals with the Sauto Thomas University, in their first game played under floodlit conditions.

The soldiers led by a solitary goal at the interval, but they were completely baffled by the prevailing conditions and did not fall into their stride until late in the second half.—Reuter.

CHINA BEATS PORTUGAL IN CORONATION GALA

BASEBALL CLUB STAGE FINE RALLY

CHINESE BEATEN
IN LAST INNINGS

McCALL BROS.
PROMINENT

A splendid rally in the last innings, during which they scored five runs, enabled the Hong Kong Baseball Club to turn what appeared to be inevitable defeat into a sensational victory, after they had been in arrears for three innings, over the Hong Kong Chinese by 5 runs to 4 in their League Baseball encounter at Caroline Hill yesterday.

Before any comments are made on either the players or game mention must be made of the sporting spirit in which the game was played. There were several stoppages during the game over decisions of the umpires but the players of both teams took the need immediately after they had appealed and the umpires' ruling in all cases was upheld.

The Hong Kong Club were much the better batting side and kept the Chinese leaders on the move throughout the game, while the pitching of the McCall brothers contributed in no small measure to the success of the team, Howard striking out no less than five batters, while his brother Ralph, who took over the mound in the sixth innings, claimed three victims.

MATTY CHANG EXCELS

Matty Chang heralded his return to local baseball with one of the brainiest games he has played in the Colony for many years. He pitched throughout six innings and was then relieved by Wally Ching, playing in the outfield.

McCall, at short stop, and Ledig, at second base, were prominent with their fielding, both bringing off good catches, while Smedley, at third base, was safe though he was at fault on more than one occasion when he misjudged the bounce of the ball on the hard pitch.

W. Ching, at short stop for the Chinese, was safe and his throwing to first base was good, but A. Ching in that position did not display much confidence. B. S. Chin, at second base, covered well and the manner he caught Melthen in the fifth innings was one of the highlights of the game.

CHINESE TAKE LEAD

At the end of the fourth innings the score was 3-1, but the Chinese took the lead in the next innings when W. Ching reached first base on an error by Divett; he then managed to reach home on an overthrow. In the next innings the Club started off with Muir, who reached first base after being hit by Matty Chang, and aided by two hits and several fielders' choices, scored five runs to give them a comfortable lead.

In the last innings E. Chang was given a walk to first base and stole second but Ralph McCall pitched well to strike out Lui after three balls were called and dealt in the same manner with T. Chin. N. Chang was struck out with three straight strikes.

Detailed scores were as follows:

CLEAN SWEEP IN INDIVIDUAL EVENTS COLONY CHAMPION DEFEATED

TERRIFIC excitement reigned at the Victoria Recreation Club's swimming pool last night when China secured a brilliant victory in the Coronation International Swimming Gala, securing wins in the three individual events and also in the Medley Relay, although they were narrowly beaten by a yard in the 300 Yards Free-Style relay for teams of six.

Portugal were a good second and, although surprised in the 100 Yards Breast-Stroke individual event, in which E. M. Marques, the Colony and Interport champion, was easily beaten, they were most unfortunate not to win the 100 Yards Back-Stroke race, in which Ng Lin beat Lionel Roza Pereira by a touch in the most thrilling event of the evening.

Lawrence, purposely kept out of the 100 Yards Free-Style individual event in order to swim back-stroke in the Medley Relay, swam a brilliant race to clock 69 secs., which was better than the winner's time in the individual event, while his brilliant spurt when swimming fifth string for Portugal in the Free Style Relay was primarily responsible for Portugal's win in this event, the short lead which he gave to A. A. da Roza being sufficient for the latter to beat Norman Lee over the last 50 yards.

The 100 Yards Breast-Stroke individual event saw a thrilling race over the first 50 yards, Ng Kam-to leading Marques by two yards, with Oliphant only a yard behind the latter. The Chinese representative covered the first 50 yards in the amazing time of 35 secs. and reached the 75 yard mark in 55 secs. when he was three yards to the good of Marques, who was a beaten man already. Oliphant tried desperately hard to reduce the widening gap between himself and Marques, but could not. The last 25 yards saw Ng Kam-to burst into a spurt and finish four yards ahead of Marques in the excellent time of 75 secs. Oliphant's time was 82 secs. which was the same as he returned during the Great Britain preliminary trials.

There was never any doubt as to who would win the 100 Yards Free-Style individual event, but speculation was rife as to the outcome for second place.

All three swimmers, Norman Lee (China), L. Oliveira (Portugal) and E. Hamilton (Great Britain), took off together in a splendid start and turned together at the 25-yard mark, but here Lee shot into the lead and covered the first 50 yards in 20½ secs. followed by Oliveira and Hamilton.

LEE'S FINE EFFORT
At the 75-yard mark Lee was in the lead by five yards, while Hamilton was extending Oliveira, being only a yard in arrears. Lee raced away in the last length to clock the excellent time of 57 secs., which is the best time recorded in the Colony outside of the Interport, in which Noel Hammond (Shanghai) clocked 58½ secs. in the meantime Oliveira and Hamilton were featured in a thrilling duel for second place and the former just managed to get home in 61.25 secs., the latter being 2.5 secs. behind him.

Norman Lee had the misfortune to swim into the ropes half-way in the last length, otherwise he might have smashed Hammond's Interport record.

THRILLING FINISH
The 100 Yards Back-stroke individual event was a thrilling race from start to finish and N. Lin certainly gave a very fine performance in his debut representative appearance, although he was lucky to have beaten Lionel Roza-Pereira by a touch, although all three judges concurred that he had won.

Calvert, Great Britain's representative, made a game effort to keep up with the other two over the first 50 yards, but found the pace too hot for him, although he finished up with a burst of speed in his own time.

Ng Lin and Roza-Pereira fought out the last length amid a frenzy of excitement and although the Portuguese representative looked the likely winner, China's swimmer produced a last-minute burst to secure a great victory.

CHAN OUTPACES MARQUES
The Medley Relay was also a thrilling event and Enrique Chan undoubtedly gave China their victory when he caught up Marques in the second lap for breast-stroke swimmers and gave Norman Lee a slight lead, from which he raced away to victory against L. Roza-Pereira.

The Free Style Relay was a ding-dong affair all the way, although Portugal never looked like losing, Wilfred Lawrence placing the issue beyond doubt with a last-minute burst to give A. A. da Roza a good lead over Norman Lee.

At the conclusion of the gala, Miss Judith Smith, daughter of His Excellency the Officer Administrator of the Government, the Hon. Mr.

N. L. Smith, who was present with a party of four, distributed the prizes.

THE RESULTS

The results of the events were as follows:

100 Yards Back-stroke: 1 Ng Lin (China), 2 L. Roza-Pereira (Portugal), 3 J. M. Calvert (Great Britain). Time: 72.3/5 secs.

100 Yards Breast-stroke: 1 Ng Kam-to (China), 2 E. M. Marques (Portugal), 3 R. G. L. Oliphant (Great Britain). Time: 75 secs.

100 Yards Free-style: Norman Lee (China), 2 L. Oliveira (Portugal), 3 E. Hamilton (Great Britain). Time: 57 secs.

300 Yards Medley Relay: 1 China (Ng Lin, Enrique Chan and Norman Lee), Time: 3 mins. 24.2/5 secs.; 2 Portugal (W. Lawrence, L. Roza-Pereira and E. M. Marques), Time: 3 mins. 31.4/5 secs.; 3 Great Britain (H. Millington, H. Mitchell and G. Arnold).

300 Yards Free-style Relay: 1 Portugal (L. Oliveira, H. L. Ozerio, C. N. da Silva, L. M. Remedios, W. Lawrence and A. A. da Roza), 2 China (Chung Tze-ting, N. Lee, Ng Chun-man, Ho Hon-chuen, Kwok Hon-ming and Robert Chan), 3 Great Britain (Lt. Cardew, R. B. Wood, A. Keown, R. Goldman, E. Hamilton and J. Kayley). Time: 2 mins. 42.2/5 secs.

Water Polo: China (Chan Shek-pui, Enrique Chan, Lau Yan-chun, Fung Kwok-wa, Chan Ki-chung, Robert Chan and Leung Ho) lost to a combined Portugal and Great Britain team (M. M. de V. Soares, W. F. Kerr and N. Delgado; J. M. Calvert; L. Roza-Pereira, A. A. da Roza and C. E. Roza-Pereira) by one goal (scored by C. E. Roza-Pereira) to nil.

Final Standings: China 17 points, Portugal 14 points and Great Britain 5 points.

Miss Katherine Rawls added the twenty-second title to her string of trophies when she captured the 300-yard individual medley at the American national A.A.U. meet in Chicago. Her time was 4:08.94; one second short of her own world's record.

K.B.G.C. LOSE TWICE TO CRAIGENGOWER

RECREIO GIVEN SCARE AT KOWLOON

ONLY FOUR 100 PER CENT. TEAMS

E. G. POST OF THE POLICE RECREATION CLUB HAS THE DISTINCTION OF BEING FULLY RESPONSIBLE FOR A UNIQUE LAWN BOWLS RESULT—ALL THREE RINKS TIEING IN A MATCH. THIS HAPPENED YESTERDAY WHEN THE CIVIL SERVICE VISITED THE POLICE.

The two other rinks had finished their 21 ends and the score was 60-57 in favour of the visitors when Post took up his position on the mat to deliver the last wood of the encounter. He carried the jack with a straight drive and the Police secured three shots to tie the match at 60-all! Teams have often tied, but all three rinks tieing probably constitutes a world record.

Yesterday's programme was full of interest, Craignower shattering the K.B.G.C. 100 per cent. records in the two senior divisions and thus securing a meritorious "double." Recreio just maintaining their unbeaten record in the First Division by one shot at the expense of the pointless K.C.C., whom their juniors trounced 83 to 45 for another "double," and the Football Club and the Yacht Club losing their 100 per cent. Third Division records, the former to the hitherto point-less Electric R.C.

TENNIS By MICHAEL ARLEN

"So you haven't gone!"
"I got as far as Putney, when I realised I could just as well go in the morning."

"But won't you have to start very early?"
"Nine. The match won't come on till eleven. Why, you're quite white, Julia!"

"Well, you gave me rather a start—thinking you weren't coming back to-night."

"I was sure you'd be asleep, so I came in as quietly as I could."

"You must have come in on tip-toe!"

"It seems to annoy you."

"Well, it is rather annoying — your sneaking about the house."

"Oh, nonsense, Julia!"

"I know it is, but, all the same, one doesn't somehow think of a man of six-foot-two stealing into his house and up the stairs on tip-toe."

"Really, Julia, you're too ridiculous! Naturally, a man comes into his house as quietly as he can when he thinks his wife is asleep. If I had slammed the door and you had been asleep you'd have been furious."

"Oh, dear, I suppose you're right."

"Of course I am, even though the way you say that puts me in the wrong I never dreamt you'd be awake, anyhow. It's past midnight and you said at ten you were tired."

"I just thought I'd read a little first. You know how it is — one begins reading — and then it's past midnight!"

"Got any cigarettes in here?"
"Oh, dear, there on the dressing-table."

"How I hate these beastly straw-tipped things of yours!"
"And how I hate cigarette smoke in my bedroom just before I go to sleep! Geoffrey, please don't smoke now."

"Good Lord I no sooner come into your room and you get sleepy!"
"Darling, is that so very unnatural?"

"While if I leave you at ten because you say you are tired — I and you still reading at midnight!"

"Well, don't let's sit up all night bickering about it."

"I'm not bickering."

"Every well, darling, you're not bickering. But remember you have got a hard match to-morrow."

"Oh, I can beat Transome on my head."

"Such a surprise for it!"

"It?"

"Your head, darling — to be used after all these years."

"I tell you what Julia — you've been getting confoundedly sharp with me lately."

"Nothing to what I will be, darling, if you insist on keeping me awake until all hours talking nonsense."

"So I'm talking nonsense, am I?"
"Of course not, darling! You are the most brilliantly intelligent man I know."

"I'll tell you what — I'm intelligent enough to have noticed that your main idea lately has been to get me out of your bedroom as soon as I come into it."

"I would be chastity in a maid — 'tis an insult in a wife."

"I wish you wouldn't try to be clever when I'm trying to talk sense."

"But, darling, I'm sleepy!"
"Oh, yes, you're always sleepy nowadays. Look here, Julia, I'm not going to stand it."

"Not going to stand what, darling — my being sleepy?"
"You know perfectly well what I mean."

"I assure you I don't! All I can see is that you are being extraordinarily aggressive about nothing."

"I suppose you call it nothing that a woman complains she's sleepy every time she sees her husband."

"But I don't call it 'nothing'! I call it perfectly natural in the case of a good many husbands."

"I suppose that's meant for me?"
"Of course not, darling. I yield to no one in my admiration for your many fascinating qualities as a man, as a tennis player, and as a companion."

"I know I'm not clever and all that, but that's no reason why you should sneer at me."

"Geoffrey, please, please go to bed now — instead of keeping us both up talking nonsense!"

"Well, I don't call it nonsense — see? I've been wanting a talk with you for a long time."

"Oh, dear!"
"That's it — sigh away! You're always sighing about something lately — good God!"

"Now what is it?"
"Well, I'll be damned!"

"Geoffrey, why are you looking at me like that?"

"I've just noticed that the book you've been holding in your hand ever since I came in is upside down — that's all!"

"Well, of all the babies! I had been reading, and then I put the book down to get something, and I'd just picked it up again when you —"

"Now take a deep breath and try another line."

"Geoffrey, are you crazy? Why on earth should I want to pretend to you I was reading when I wasn't?"

"I don't know. I fancy I don't know many things. But I'm jolly well going to get to the bottom of all I can."

"From the way you're looking round the bedroom anyone would think you were looking for —"

"I don't give a damn for what anyone would think. Now, just listen to me."

"Geoffrey, don't be so rough — you're bruising my arm."

"You're my wife, aren't you?"
"Yes, darling. But you are hurting my arm."

"And you know I love you, don't you?"
"Yes, darling. But you are still hurting my arm."

"Listen to me, Julia — what has been the matter with you these last few weeks?"

"Matter, darling?"
"God, you've got eyes as innocent as an angel's!"

"Thank you, darling."

"Julia, why have you been so difficult lately?"
"Difficult? Do you mean sleepy?"

"If you think you're going to get out of this by laughing at me you're mistaken."

"Geoffrey, have you been drinking?"
"Julia, why have you absolutely refused to be a wife to me ever since we came back from Cannes?"

"But I haven't refused!"
"Not in so many words, perhaps; but by your evasions, it has come to that."

"Come to what, darling?"
"Confound you, Julia, try and be serious for once!"

"Very well. Only, look out!"
"You mean that if you once begin being serious —"

"I mean that a serious woman and a submissive wife are incompatible."

"I'm not going to be put off by your second-rate cleverness. Look here, you've scarcely even let me kiss you lately, have you? Why?"

"Are you sure you really want to know?"
"I'm damn well going to know!"

"You'll be angry."

"Go on."

"Heavens, how angry you'll be!"
"Go on!"

"I've every intention of going on. To begin with, how long have we been married?"

"What's that got to do with it?"
"You'll see. How long, my darling? Oh, how long?"

"Well, five years. Go on."

"And how have you spent these five years?"
"Me! How have I spent them?"

"Yes, you. Oh, dear, don't gape at me! It makes me want to scream."

"What the devil are you getting at, Julia?"
"What is your record as a husband these last five years?"

"Damnation, anyone would think I was in the dock!"
"Well, let me tell you. You have spent the five years of our married life in being a good sportsman and a popular fellow."

"Look here, you've not daring to tell me that I haven't been a good husband?"
"Oh dear yes, you've been a good husband! An unfaithful husband might conceivably make love to his wife now and then just to soothe his conscience."

"I call that an indecent and un-English remark."

"Levelled at you, the great English sportsman — isn't it terrible, Geoffrey?"

"I wish I knew what you are talking about. I ask you why you haven't let me come near you lately and you answer by sneering at me for playing games!"

"I don't mind your playing games."

"That's very kind of you. I'm sure."

"What I do mind is your not playing the game with me."

"For heaven's sake, Julia!"
"Well?"

"Don't let's say things we'll be sorry for later."

"I shan't be sorry, I assure you, to end an impossible situation."

"But what have I done, Julia? How haven't I played the game with you?"

"You have never made love to me once during the five years of our married life. You have taken me completely for granted. You have never wooed me, you have never tried to please me. You have come home tired from playing your idiotic tennis and have expected me to be your refreshment and your solace. Like almost every other sportsman you are as idiotically vain as a peacock, yet you take good care not to show that to anyone but your wife. You are kind to animals. You court dogs and horses, but you have made a convenience of my bed. You have never been my lover in all this time. I am supposed to be beautiful. That is why you 'love' me. I am young. That is why I fell in love with you. I have borne you three children, and you were impatient for the birth of each so that you could again use my youth and use up my beauty. And all that's the truth may God forgive you."

"I love, Julia, what an actress!"
"Oh, I'm not acting!"

"I meant, what an actress you've been all this time. I never dreamt that you hated me."

"Oh, I don't hate you. No, Geoffrey dear. I don't hate you. I have no feelings of any kind towards you."

"You know how to hurt, don't you?"
"While you, my handsome Geoffrey, hurt unconsciously and casually, like a conqueror. You have been hurting me for five years. Now that is over."

"Oh, is it?"
"The umpire's decision, darling, is final. No umpire being available at such short notice, I am substituting for him."

"To hell with the umpire!"
"A most unworthy sentiment coming from the only Englishman who can actually get as far as the semi-finals at Wimbledon!"

"So it's over, is it — your being my wife?"
"Technically, no. Actually, yes."

"And I suppose it counts for nothing that I love you, that you are the only woman I have ever loved?"

"You use the word 'love.' Geoffrey, as though you hated it."

"Julia, you are my wife. You are going on being my wife."

"But, darling, William the Conqueror died in 1067!"
"Mock away! But, by God —"

"Don't touch me!"
"Stop me!"

"Geoffrey!"
"By God, you look at me as though —"

"That's better! Now we can breathe."

"You look at me as though I were a stranger!"
"You are."

"Then you refuse to be my wife?"
"Yes. Until you court me as a man should court a woman."

"Court? Where the devil do you get these fancy words?"

"The English language, dear, holds more words than a public school man ever dreams of. You ought to try speaking, it some time. It's quite a rich language."

"Expect me to make pretty speeches to you, do you?"
"Pretty, no! Speeches, no! But a little affectionate conversation now and then — yes!"

"By heaven, I've got it! Why is that bathroom door closed?"
"Because it's pulled to, dear."

STOMACH SUFFERER DISCHARGED FROM HOSPITAL AS INCURABLE

Now Eats Good Meals

There is no need for stomach sufferers to despair of relief if they have not tried Maclean Brand Stomach Powder. Almost every day letters arrive from one-time "Incurables" who have been put right by Maclean Brand. Read this letter from Mr. J. H.:

"Four years ago I suffered agony, and hospital treatment was useless. I have rolled over in the garden so great has been the pain. I was X-rayed each hour for 7 hours and was later told that I had a Duodenal Ulcer and must undergo an operation. I refused and was discharged from the hospital as incurable. I then started to take Maclean Brand Stomach Powder and Tablets. Soon after, all pain vanished and the pain and agony has not returned. I can now sit down to a good meal without any fear. Before, even a cup of tea was distasteful to me."

Why not make your digestive troubles vanish the same swift way? Maclean Brand Stomach Powder is as effective in banishing flatulence, biliousness, heartburn, as the more serious digestive complaints. But make sure that it is the genuine Maclean Brand. Just look for the "ALEX. C. MACLEAN" signature on the bottle and carton and you can't go wrong. Powder or tablets, never sold loose.

TENNIS . . .

What were you doing when I came in here? You didn't expect me back to-night. What were you up to? Come on, out with it!"

"Am I to understand that you are accusing me of entertaining a lover who is now, for the purposes of concealment, in the bathroom?"

"By God, I'll strangle you! I'll—"

"You won't live to, if you choke yourself with temper."

"Who—is—in—that—bathroom?"

"Geoffrey, are you mad?"

"There's someone in there, I'll swear it! I'll kill you and him before I've done with you."

"You brute, how dare you suspect me!"

"That book you were pretending to read was upside down! You must have snatched it up when you heard me outside, though you pretended you hadn't heard me. Julia, I swear I'll kill you if I find you've been unfaithful to me. And you lie there telling me off about my behaviour and character while all the time the truth probably is that you've fallen in love with some clever anaemic pipsqueak who can't come out and face me like a man but hides in the bathroom."

"Don't throw cigarette-ash all over the carpet, Geoffrey. You know how I dislike it."

"Who—is—in—that—bathroom?"

"Find out for yourself!"

"Julia, for pity's sake! If you only knew what I feel! I can't bear suspecting you. I don't want to open that beastly door. By God, Julia, I love you!"

"It's the first time you've said that convincingly since we were engaged."

"Will you swear to me that you—"

"I won't swear anything. If you want to suspect me, you can. Only, look out. Suspicions are apt to turn out true."

"You lie there looking like an angel and telling me you have a lover!"

"I haven't got a lover. A husband is quite enough of a bore, thank you."

"You're lying. By God, Julia, I'll—"

"Explode, darling."

"Take your hands off me, you brute!"

"Will you swear to me that you don't love anyone else?"

"I've told you I am doing no swearing of any kind to-night. Get away, get away! You bore me."

"Julia, I've told you—I don't want to suspect you. I shall believe you if you tell me that there is no one in the bathroom."

"I'm tired of talking. Good-night, darling."

"Is there anyone in that bathroom?"

"Good-night, darling."

"Julia, is there anyone in the bathroom?"

"Good-night, darling."

"Answer me, woman!"

"YES!"

"What?"

"Well, you wanted to know, didn't you?"

"By God! Your lover!"

"What a beastly mind you've got, Geoffrey!"

"You—you of all people! My wife! The mother of our children!"

"Don't be tiresome, darling."

"By God Julia, you must be heartless! I don't so much mind your being unfaithful to me—but haven't you a thought for our children?"

"Silly ass!"

"Woman, did you call me a silly ass?"

"Yes, darling."

"We'll see who's the silly ass! By the time I've done with your lover he'll have to spend the rest of his life in a bathroom. 'Come out of there, you swine!'"

"An Englishman's home is his castle. Granted. But as soon as he makes it into a pig-sty."

"By God, the door's locked! Come out of there, you dirty thief, before I pull you out!"

"Don't be rude to strangers, Geoffrey! It's embarrassing for me."

"Hold your tongue, woman! I'm going to smash down this door."

"Geoffrey, just one word!"

"Hold your tongue!"

"Geoffrey, let me warn you before you—"

"Do you think I'll ever again believe a word you say?"

"You had better for just this once. If you break down that door—"

"By God, I can hear someone in there! Come out of it you—!"

"Geoffrey, you will wake the children!"

"Woman, make up your mind about this—those children are mine and mine only, after this! Damnation, this door's tough! Ah-ha, it's giving way!"

"You will hurt your shoulder, darling! Here's the key. A key is awfully useful for opening a door with!"

"You've had the key all the time!"

"Yes, darling. But I just wanted to enjoy the spectacle of you smashing a door. I've heard such a lot about men smashing doors. You aren't very efficient at it, I think."

"Hold your tongue, woman, and give me that key!"

"Catch, darling. Oh, butter-fingers!"

"Now then! . . . Good God!"

"I told you so, darling."

Wherever you may spend the SUMMER
you can always

Make Your Own Fresh Milk

. that is delicious for drinking

YOU need milk that will keep perfectly without refrigeration in the hottest summer weather. Klim Powdered Whole Milk is that kind of milk. Pure milk from which only the water has been removed. Nothing added and nothing is lost. Mix Klim with either iced water or hot water and you obtain rich, creamy, delicious liquid milk—with the natural flavour of milk fresh from the cow.

When you consider that Klim provides you with the best milk obtainable in the U.S. or Canada and that when you open the tin in China it is identical with fresh dairy milk one-hour after pasteurization—because it is packed in vacuum sealed tins—it is little short of a miracle that you are able to obtain a regular supply of such milk in China at a low cost.

So Klim will enable you to give your children sweet, fresh milk every time they want it this summer. Get one of the new Klim mixers and mix it as needed—a glass full or a quart at a moment's notice. There is none left over to go sour and therefore no waste. Many mothers now use this mixer at the table.

Every pound of Klim makes 4 quarts of fresh milk when reliquified. Klim is sold in 3 convenient sizes—1-lb., 2½ lb. and 5-lb. vacuum sealed tins. There is no danger of contamination.

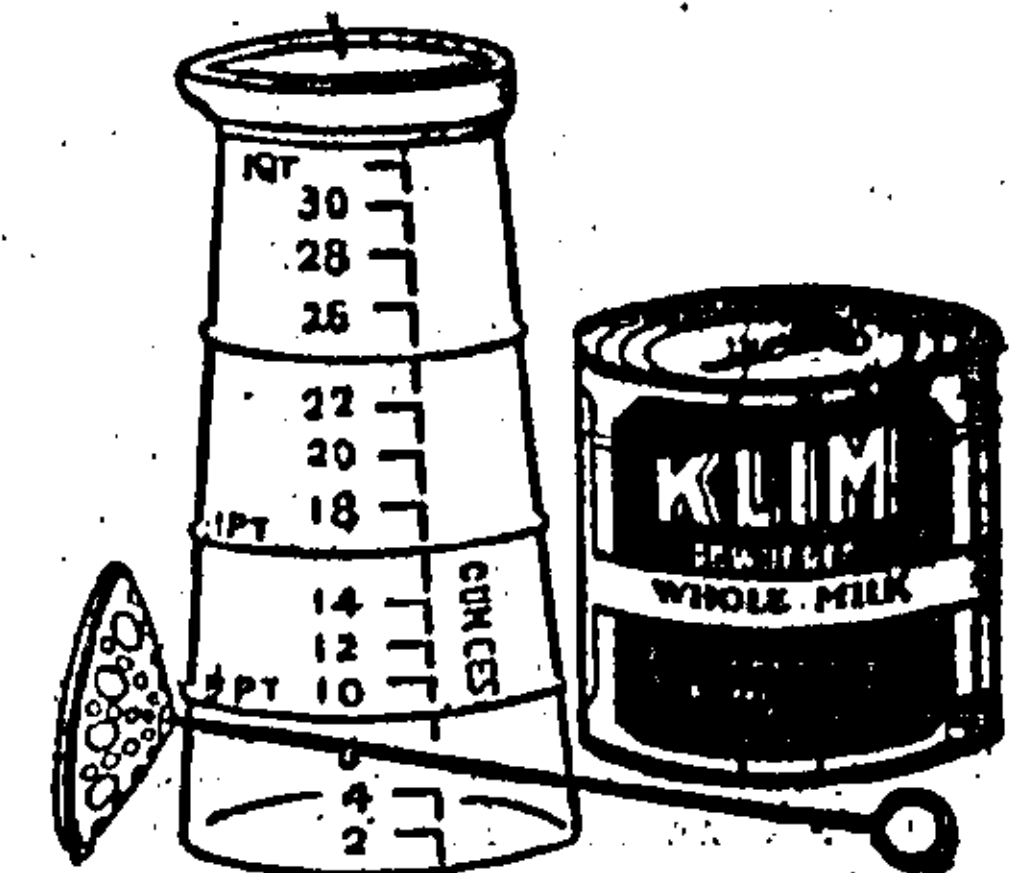

Klim is now being distributed throughout South China and is obtainable at Provision Stores, Dispensaries and Confectionery Stores.

"Your maid!"

"Come here, Maise! Poor Maise! Were you frightened?"

"Oh, madam, ever so!"

"Look, Geoffrey, how you have frightened poor Maise! You had better go to bed now, Maise. And let this be a lesson to you never to have a husband of your own."

"Yes, madam. Good-night, madam. Good-night, sir."

"Good-night, Maise. Call me at ten. Now, Geoffrey, what have you to say for yourself?"

"Julia, I—I—"

"Poor Geoffrey! A cruel joke, wasn't it? I'm sorry, dear, but I couldn't help it."

"Julia, will you ever—God, I feel a fool—will you ever forgive me for suspecting you?"

"But, darling, I wanted you to suspect me! I heard you opening the front door, and at once plotted the whole thing. Husband returning unexpectedly catches chap in wife's bedroom."

"Well, I suppose I'd better go to bed. I'm no match for you if all you want to do is to make a fool of me."

"Darling, I just wanted to shake you up, that's all—to shake you out of your complacency. And I did it, too! How fierce you looked."

"Do you know, Julia, I've never loved you so—so madly as when I thought I'd lost you."

"That's usually the way, darling. A silly world. Good-night, sleep well!"

"Good-night, Julia! . . . I say, Julia!"

"Yes, darling?"

"Julia, I worship you, I adore you, I love you! Do you love me—just a little?"

"Yes, darling."

"Good-night, Julia."

"Good-night, darling."

"I'm going to have a bath now. After all that motoring."

"Nice for you, darling."

"May I come in and say good-night to you afterwards?"

"Remember you've got that match to-morrow."

"Damn the match!"

"Am I more important to you than tennis?"

"Julia, don't laugh at me!"

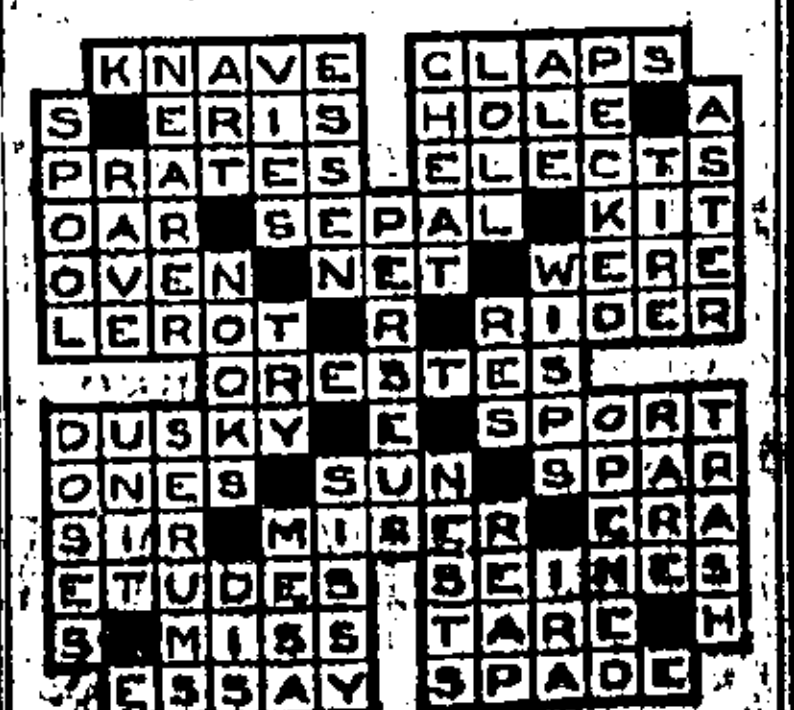

"Am I more important to you than all games, dogs and horses?"

"YES!"

"Thank you, darling."

"May I come in and say good-night, Julia?"

Catering For Coronation Crowds

A famous London caterer reveals that one of his special orders to cope with Coronation crowd demands consisted of:

100,000 ham and beef sandwiches;
50,000 meat pies;
100,000 assorted cakes and buns;
120,000 packets of biscuits and four tons of chocolates.

His job of catering for the crowd in and around Hyde Park on Coronation Day meant the biggest menu in history. He had to see that the needs of at least 1,000,000 people were met for thirty hours non-stop.

This is how he managed to do
it:—

Fifty buffets every seventy-five yards behind the stands along the route:

Twelve marquees in Hyde Park and Green Park supplied with food from eight storage marquees;

Elaborate water boilers for making 250,000 cups of tea.

In the villages of Rodmersham and Tongue, near Sittingbourne, Kent, on Coronation Day, battle axes and spears were waved instead of flags. "War" between Ancient Britons and Saxons was waged, and early history re-enacted by villagers.

ENGLISH AMMUNITION IN DUBLIN DUMP

Ammunition, some of English make and apparently carried from Woolwich, was found in the farmhouse of Donal Collins, forty-one, of Sallins, Co. Kildare, Irish Free
State. He was sentenced by a Dublin military tribunal to four years' penal servitude for concealing arms.

It was stated that the police found a tunnel at the farmhouse leading to an empty underground dug-out, newly concreted and timbered.

In the house they found twelve sub-machine-guns, 5,000 rounds of rifle ammunition, 3,000 rounds of revolver ammunition.

Collins bitterly attacked President de Valera.

"I held those guns by order of the then president of the Irish Republic issued to all ranks at the 'cease fire' to dump arms, and, in no circumstances, hand them over to the Free State Government," he told the Court.

"I have carried out that order, but he swallowed the oath and has become the Free State Government.
De Valera's tactics have brought me into this dock."

DEATH OF VISCOUNT SNOWDEN

OUTSTANDING STATESMAN: LIFE
BATTLE AGAINST INFIRMITY

of social and economic problems and became a convinced Socialist.
He had been greatly interested in a series of articles on Socialism written by a Wesleyan Minister named Keeble, and from Keeble
he progressed through Thomas Kirkup to Robert Owen and, as he expressed it, he suddenly saw light, like Saint Paul on the road to Damascus.

HIS FIRST ELECTION

He became a journalist and lecturer in the Independent Labour Party; he was asked to speak on many Labour platforms, and within two years he was recognised by his adversaries as a force to be reckoned with. He contested Blackburn in the winter of 1900.

Blackburn was a Tory stronghold, and Snowden was poor and little known. But if he did not succeed in taking the fort at that date, he, nevertheless, made so many converts that he destroyed the confidence of his opponents, and at the next election his victory was a foregone conclusion.
He held the seat until, in the Election of 1913, like Mr. Ramsay
MacDonald and other Labour leaders, he was rejected owing to his pacifist activities during the War.

In Blackburn there were three thousand families who had been bereaved by the War, and his attitude alienated many of his former supporters. But at a later stage he showed himself more in unison with the spirit of this country, for he was a strong opponent of Communism and hostile to the Bolsheviks. Lady Snowden, in two books recording her post-war experience of Russia, did much to influence Labour opinion in England against belief in the Soviet Regime.

THE HAGUE CONFERENCE

Snowden's Budget in 1924 was everywhere regarded as a masterpiece of achievement, and none the less so because no one doubted that it was framed in accordance with the principle "reculer pour mieux sauter."

It was, in fact, a Liberal Budget, for the reduction in food taxes had long been a feature of the Labour programme. No one deplored the General Strike of 1926 more than did Mr. Snowden, who denounced it in no measured terms.

It was not, however, until the memorable conference at The Hague in August, 1929, that the real force of Mr. Snowden's personality was realised, and accepted, by the world at large.

The Hague was one of the quaintest conferences to which the Great War has given birth.
In fact, it could hardly be called a conference at all. Mr. Snowden, remained, throughout its entire length, the sole arbiter on the questions discussed. He stated his requirements in unmistakable, if somewhat brusque language, and he would abate no "jot or tittle" from his demands.

He did battle for the interests of the British taxpayer with a vigour displayed by no British representative at previous conferences of the kind; his attitude was wholly justified by results, and the Socialist Chancellor woke one morning to find himself a national idol. The strangest feature of the position, perhaps, was, not merely the spectacle of a Socialist Minister standing up emphatically for British rights, but loudly proclaiming his pride at having done so.

"ACID FEROCITY"

The House always filled when it was known that Snowden was "up". His tense manner, his endavourous features, his thin, pursed lips, and sibilant voice all heightened the effect of his acid rhetoric.
Of one of his speeches, Mr. Lloyd George remarked, "he has an acid ferocity all his own." Of his maiden speech, Snowden said, "I felt no different from when addressing an ordinary public meeting.
The composition of the audience seemed not unlike that to which I had so long been accustomed to speak. They applauded the same sentiments. The House was full and I had nothing to complain of in the matter of attention."

Much of his success was due to his oratorical gifts, and his eloquence was the fruit of conviction.
His early speeches were frequently committed to memory, but gradually his sincerity and his faith provided him with the words he required and many of his speeches were delivered without preparation.

ASCETIC COUNTERTENANCE

Of his personal appearance, Mr.
A. P. Nicholson wrote a few years ago, "His pallid face, lined as if by suffering, strangely recalls that of Cardinal Manning. It is a gaunt, ascetic countenance, which at rare moments is illuminated by a sweet smile."

Lord Snowden's clever wife is almost as distinguished as was her husband, and while being of the greatest assistance to him, had also worked in the cause of social reform. It is not too much to say that both won the liking and the well-earned respect of all who knew them. Their sincerity and firm adherence to the truth as they saw it were refreshing characteristics in the "game" of political life.
Snowden's ideal was "to reorganise industry and society as to remove hardships and poverty and establish human happiness."—

Hunter Explosion Disaster

VICTIMS BURIED AT ALMERIA

Gibraltar, Yesterday.
The bodies of the three seamen killed in the explosion which seriously disabled the destroyer
H.M.S. Hunter on Thursday, were buried in the British cemetery at Almeria to-day.

The funeral was attended by members of the British Diplomatic Corps and representatives of the Spanish Government, while Spanish sailors acted as pall-bearers.

The fourteen men wounded in the explosion, who had received treatment on board a Spanish warship, were transferred today to the British hospital ship Malne.

The cause of the explosion is believed to have been the striking of a mine, although the peculiar nature of the damage led at first to a suggestion that the Hunter had been struck by a torpedo.—
